Dr. A. T. Robertson in "A Harmony of the Gospels" puts the events of this lesson in the following order: Verses 14-17 occurring on Sunday; then verses 18-19 (the cursing of the barren fig tree) on Monday; and then verses 12-13 (the cleansing of the Temple), also on Monday.

Late Sunday afternoon, Jesus returned to the home of his beloved friends in Bethany, Mary, Martha, and Lazarus, where he spent the night. Returning to Jerusalem only a few miles distant, late Monday morning he and his disciples traveled the road that led up the brow of the hill called Olivet, down across the valley of the Kidron, up Mount Zion on the other side, and into the city. Being late in the morning, Jesus hungered. Seeing a fig tree on the side of the road, he approached it eagerly, thinking to satisfy his hunger. However, instead of this, he found that the tree was barren, having only leaves.

Jesus pronounced a curse on the fruitless tree, and condemned it to die. Matthew declares that the tree immediately withered, but Mark's account states that the disciples, on passing the tree the next morning noticed that it was blasted and called Jesus' attention to the fact.

Why did Jesus curse the barren fig tree? Was it because of his disappointment in not finding fruit to satisfy his physical hunger? We think not. He did it to teach the valuable lesson to all of us about the worthlessness of a fruitless life. God expects his children to bear fruit, worthy of the blessings that he has so kindly bestowed upon them. He also warns up against the sin of pretense. That fig tree gave every evidence to the world of being a fruitful tree, that it had figs but it did not. One of the things that Christ condemned most severely was the sin of hypocrisy. Are you what you seem to be?

Jesus and his disciples passed on to Jerusalem. The heart and center of that city was the great Temple, where the Jews gathered from all over the then known world at certain times for religious ceremonies. Jesus often went to the Temple and, on this day, he made his way there. The scene which greeted him there made his heart boil with righteous indignation.

There in the outer court of the Temple, set aside as the place of worship for the Gentiles, were the money-changers and those who made a regular business of selling oxen and doves to be used as sacrifices in the temple worship. As Jesus looked upon this deplorable state of religion, his indignation steadily mounted within him. These people had taken his Father's House which should have been a house of prayer, and made of it a den of thieves. Thus, in righteous wrath, Jesus drove out the traders and overthrew the tables of the money-changers. The "Gentle Jesus, meek and mild," was also, when occasion demanded, "a consuming fire."

"The cleansing of the temple belongs to the death days," writes Professor Walter E. Bundy. "The cross is only four days away in Mark. With this scene the passion drama proper begins. If we ask the plain historical question, 'What one thing brought about Jesus' death in such an abrupt and tragic manner?' we shall have to answer, 'The cleansing of the Temple.' To be sure, the cleansing does not figure in the charges against Jesus in the trial scenes, but henceforth the chief priests and their agents are omnipresent. They figure either directly or indirectly in every instigation against him, and they never leave off their persistent pursuit until the death scene itself. Their zeal amounts to religious fanaticism. They could not use the cleansing of the temple as a case against Jesus, for the act doubtless had popular approval. But it does explain the determined and bitter opposition of the chief priests to the Man who defied their system, invaded their own special precinct of authority, and took things into his own hands."

Andover Black
100 Per Cent
Friday Night
Fine Co-operation a Spirit Shown in Andover During First Practice Blackout.

Andover's participation in the legendary county practice blackout Friday night, from 10 to 11:30 per cent, according to reports, Government observers came to Andover.

According to observers surrounding hills the village black as "a pocket in a shroud" only lights showing from tops being the signal light on the railroad which were not in the blackout.

A temporary hospital within the Masonic Temple with doctors and nurses, men, ambulances, police, wardens, fire watchers, demolition squads, rescue highway and utility repair and the Boy Scout messengers all on the alert and very busy carried out their duties.

They were answered promptly people in general were very active in observing the rule.

The Empire Gas company, under the supervision of Guy Harder, maintained a regular supply of gas by the blackout system worked out by themselves, which enabled them to continue the regular service to homes and still maintain a blackout.

Mayor Carpenter, local attorney and C. M. Holt, chief warden wish to thank Andover citizens for the fine co-operation wholehearted support received from Andover citizens.

Mrs. Rose M. Mattison
Mrs. Rose Mattison passed a life at her home on Main Street, Andover about 11 o'clock morning, May 12, 1942, a five weeks illness from pneumonia.

Mrs. Rose Mattison was born May 1872 at Shongo, N. Y., daughter of Samuel and Augustina Coats. October 7, 1889, she was united in marriage to George Mattison, whose death occurred in 1932. Mrs. Mattison had resided in Andover for the past 10 years, previous to which she resided in Whitesville and Elmira.

Surviving are a sister, Mrs. Cleason of Andover, two sons, Elmer Coats of Andover and two grandsons, Mrs. Clifford Bliven of Andover and Mrs. Allen Hoskett of Andover.

Services will be held at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Mattison at Lloyd Tebo of the Andover Baptist church officiating with burial in Hillside cemetery.

Navy Relief Drive to Start in Andover
Mrs. Frank Holmes, chairman of the Navy Relief Drive campaign for funds which will help the dependents of U.S. men killed in the war, is calling for co-operation of Andover citizens in this effort.

Allegany county has a $3,000 for this drive, of which over's share has been secured. Plans are in the making to raise this quota in the future, but volunteer contributions will be gladly accepted over National Bank any amount.

This is the first time the Relief Society has made a special fund for carry-over activities. In the past this fund has been used to help needy thru contributions from men, but we are now a new families of men killed in the war is growing so fast that it has been forced to turn to public for assistance.

Your bit will be appreciated.
