Russia and Japan

"A war between Russia and Japan is as inevitable as was the war between Russia and Germany. The long standing differences between the two nations can never be settled except by force," are opening statements in the book "Russia and Japan" by Maurice Hindus. Among United States journalists, Hindus, himself a Russian, educated in America, is perhaps the best qualified to report conditions in his native land. He argues that the ferocity of Russian resistance reflects a new kind of Russian spirit, armed by a new Russian industrial and agricultural strength.

This new spirit has been fostered in three ways. First, by the power of the idea, meaning that private ownership has become a social crime.

Second, by the power of organization, meaning total control by the state of industry and agriculture so that every peacetime function is in effect a military function.

Third, by the power of the machine—is the idea to which a generation of Russians has sacrificed food, clothing, cleanliness, even the barest comforts. Author Hindus believes these will save Russia from subjugation by the Japs.

Among the most exciting sections of "Russia and Japan," are those which give the reader a new idea of Siberia which actually produces both polar bears and cotton, contains great modern cities, and is the center of Russia's gigantic armament industry.

He reveals that in the last ten years around 3,000 armed clashes have taken place on the borders of these two Asiatic powers. He tells of Japan's need of Russia's resources and her envy of the dominant place held by the Soviet in greater Asia. The workers of Russia will continue to battle against any influence or nation which would return the old landowner system, and place the peasant at the bottom of the social pyramid.

Maurice Hindus has twice been right, first when he said that Germany and Russia would fight—They did. In "Hitler Cannot Conquer Russia" he forecast that Germany would be checked—She is. Now he states emphatically that Russia and Japan must fight—Will they? Read this brilliant analysis and understand why the answer is "Yes."

News Briefs About Local Boys In U. S. Service

12th Regiment Armory, 120 West 62nd St., New York City

Dear Uncle Andy:

I was in Buffalo Monday morning on business for the Army when the call came into headquarters to report at Governors Island the next day. I went back to Rochester as soon as possible and left that night for New York.

I don't know how I got the assignment I have now. The Army is putting on a big show under the direction of Irving Berlin called "This Is the Army." There are about 300 soldiers in it and I have charge of them to see that they get some military training along with the show. The men are all former Broadway actors or musicians and were selected from different camps. The show is to open on Broadway July 4th and is to run for a month here in New York; then on a tour of the country and finally to Hollywood to make a movie. Box seats for the opening night are $25 each.

I regretted to leave Rochester as we had such a nice place there, but like this better as I can live at home. It is only about ten minutes walk from where we live on 71st Street to the Armory. Hope I will be lucky enough to go with the men on the trip to Hollywood.

As ever,
LT. JAMES W. FULLER

A card from Private Harold (Chuck) Church, brother of Robert Church of this village received this week reads as follows:

Arrived here today (June 11) after a 22-hour ride from Fort Niagara. It's pretty hot down here today, but the fellows say it's the warmest day they have had in some time. O'Boyle came too, but I am in a different barracks so don't see him very often. We're pretty busy. Don't expect to be here only for eight or ten weeks. Will write more later. Yours,

PRIVATE HAROLD CHURCH,
Btry. C, 2nd AA Tng. Bn., Ft. Eustis, Va.

Last week, in the list of local boys in the United States services the name of Harold C. Church was unintentionally omitted and instead of "Private" Leo Fulkerson should have been his rank of A. C. (Air Cadet.)

Privates Burrell C. Cole and Herman Ingraham have returned to Ft. Niagara after spending a five-day furlough at their homes in Andover.

Word from Howard Brewster states that he has been promoted to Corporal in the Medical Corps. His new address is:

Corporal Howard Brewster, Medical Attachment, Med. Dept., 92nd Armored F. A. Bn., Fort Benning, Ga.

Word came to Andover this morning of the promotion of Sergeant Raymond Lynch to Staff Sergeant.
