ON THE OFFENSIVE AMERICA!

Wars are won by attacking, not by sitting in a fort!

And today America is taking the offensive against the Axis with hard-fighting, non-stopable men and materials!

We're taking the offensive, too, against the enemy at home—the inflationary 6th column that blows prices sky high.

You can help in both fights by saving at least 10% of your money in U. S. War Bonds every pay day. Attack the Axis with your dollar today.

You can start with as little as a 10c War Stamp and you can get a $25.00 War Bond (maturity value) for only $18.75—at your local post office, bank or other convenient sales agency.

the Army down to the present moment with a series of dramatic photographs taken from the files of the U. S. Army Signal Corps and the Air Forces together with some of the best shots taken during the past six months by several leading American news photographers.

Featured are action shots of para-ski troops, tank destroyers, aerial gunners and many other soldiers who play a vital role in the new army. There are portraits of our army leaders in the United States and in various parts of the world where American troops are stationed.

One million copies of the first edition were published, half of which will be sold as souvenir programs at the Army War Shows. Proceeds from the sale of ATTACK go to Army Emergency Relief.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company, sponsors of the book, will circulate another half-million copies among the employees of Bell System as a morale booster.

Primarily a pictorial, the 56-page booklet sets forth the American way of fighting. "Attack is the American philosophy of war," it states. "It is the heritage of our new army, handed down to us by several generations of heroic fighting men. Attack has been the doctrine of all great American commanders since General George Washington crossed the icy Delaware river Christmas night, 1776."

Louisa's Letter

Dear Louisa:
A boy I like very much has asked me to have my picture made in a bathing suit and give it to him. He hasn't asked me for any other kind of photograph, although I have several and he knows it. Would you give it to him?
Tennessee. A. M.

Answer
I certainly would not have my picture taken in a bathing suit to give to a boy. It is one thing for a group of young people at the beach to take snapshots and quite another for a boy to ask you to have your picture taken in a bathing suit for him to keep in his room. I should not take such a request as a compliment.
Yours,
LOUISA.

see you a great deal during your two months' visit to your sister; now he has stopped, but says that he doesn't want to stop.
I think you explain his surprising conduct in the last line of your letter, when you write that he says he "doesn't make enough to support a wife."
Perhaps, the young man realized that he was letting his heart run away with his head and that if he kept on with his courtship, he would soon find himself married without the financial means necessary to support a wife.
You might compromise by seeing each other once or twice a week until he has a better job instead of making it a nightly date.
Good luck,
LOUISA.

To E. C. — Tennessee:
Your only salvation will be for you and your husband to move out of his parent's home. With four children to take care of, you deserve a home of your own and should not be made to live with people who show you no consideration. If your husband only knew how much happier all of you would be, including your parents, he would lose no time in finding a place to move.
The old people have their faults, I know, and are probably very critical of everything you do and interfere with the management of the children. But, on the other hand, you and the children probably worry them as much as they do you. If you explain this to your husband and if he has any reason left, I am sure he will agree to a change.
Good luck,

Married Men Available to Army Under Draft

"Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the fact that the Servicemen's Dependents Allowance Act of 1942 does not defer married registrants with dependents," Brigadier General Ames T. Brown, New York State Director of Selective Service, declared in an interview.

"It sets up an order of groups or categories from which the registrants shall be selected," he asserted.

"Any question as to when Class III registrants (those with dependents) will be selected for service with the armed forces must take into consideration the fact that no two boards are exactly alike with regard to the number of 1-A men available. Various factors, such as the kind of industry, if any, in the community or whether it is an agricultural area, may cause one board to have more available registrants for military service than another," General Brown said.

"Before the adoption of the Servicemen's Dependents Allowance Act, the supply of registrants for military service (Class 1) did not foresee the eventual selection of every registrant of a board since registrants in Class 111 practically had a permanent deferment. The Act has changed that situation. Under the Act, every registrant of a board becomes liable for eventual selection for military service, the law specifying in what order, as to dependency and family relationships, they shall be called. As rapidly as a board's pool of Class 1 men becomes exhausted, it must be replenished by the reclassification of registrants in other classes in the order specified by the Servicemen's Dependents Allowance Act.

"A board's principal source of supply of selected men, outside of registrants in Class 1, are Class 11 (registrants given an occupational deferment) and Class 111. "A registrant in any other class must be reclassified in 1-A before selection." When a board exhausts its other classes in maintaining its pool of men for selection, there is nothing to do but begin the reclassification of married men with dependents, place them in Class 1, and select them for military service.

"Prior to the passage of the Servicemen's Dependents Allowance Act, boards were faced with the hardship placed upon dependents with the selection of the wage earner of the family." The Act has corrected that situation. Married registrants will certainly be inducted within the near future," General Brown said.
