SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

GOD'S COVENANT WITH MANKIND

International Sunday School Lesson for July 26, 1942.

Golden Text: "I will remember my covenant."—Genesis 9:15.

Lesson Text: Genesis 9: 1-16.

In our lesson we study the Hebrew story of the universal flood, which destroyed all men and animals except only a select few chosen to populate the earth and preserve creation. We say the "Hebrew story" because there are other accounts of a similar catastrophe in the traditional records of nearly every people, differing in detail, lacking in any spiritual interpretation or relating it to other gods, but everywhere, throughout the world, as scholars have delved into the secrets of centuries long past, as handed down countless generations of word by mouth before the art of writing was learned, a story of a great flood of destruction and a rebuilding of mankind is encountered.

There need be no difficulty about the fact. We recall a devoted Christian who scorned the possibility of any authenticity in the Babylonian story of the flood as deciphered from ancient clay tablets. He challenged the existence of any such story except in Genesis. Yet, he was badly in error; for, if Genesis is right and a great flood once engulfed all mankind, every living creature descended from the survivors of that flood, and the fact of similar stories possessed by the entire range of mankind is strong evidence of an original, positive fact upon which all are based.

The discrepancies between these stories and legends need not worry any faithful mind. Many historical characters are the subjects of contradictory judgment, even although they lived after the beginnings of recorded journals. The origins and causes of well-established events and customs are likewise variously explained by historians and sociologists. So, why expect a primitive event, like the flood, to be carried mentally and passed down verbally through the ages to various folk scattered over the face of the world to coincide and agree in full? Isn't it enough to know that in all parts of the world are found recognized traces of primitive stories all seeking to recount the essential fact that there was a great water disaster meeting the main features of our flood story?

On the other hand, there are similarities in the various stories, only to be explained by the theory that these divergent tales were the children of a common ancestor, as they had to be, according to the Genesis story and all of them. Xisuthrus, the hero of one such record, was the tenth Babylonian king, as Noah was the tenth patriarch. The rainbow, as the token of God's promise to every created object, is found not only in the Hebrew record but also in a Lithuanian flood-story. Both the Babylonian and Jewish descriptions of the "ark" or "box" refer to "bitumen." The sending out of birds are also prominent in these two records, several Indian versions, and others. Finally, after the flood, the grounding of the ark on a mountain, is fairly common, although the fabled location of this eminence is differently placed.

Geologist, as we pointed out in a recent lesson by their studies of the rocks have confirmed the story of creation as contained in Genesis by scientifically showing that the order in which animals appeared conform to this early record. So, with the flood, throughout the world, regardless of strata or formation, the geologist declares that all of our present land has once or more often been under water. The geologist says the process is continuing, that shore lines fluctuate in the ages, but the story of the flood can not be denied on any scientific proof that water hasn't covered the land.

However, the Genesis story may not necessarily imply a flood of greater extent than the inhabitable part of the world at that time, and scientific evidence proves the possibility of such a tremendous, wide-reaching flood. The melting of the ice-caps, the breaking of the Atlantic into the Mediterranean, and the overflow connection through the Red Sea to eastern waters, submerging vast areas of land formerly habitable, is recognized by geological evidence.

The Hebrew record of the flood, like their record of other things, like this great flood with the God of creation, for successive centuries following Adam had developed, sin and crime had spread, violence was common, and God the creator of all things saw the necessity of a fresh beginning. Why? We have no answer, each soul can cope with the impossible task of interpreting the divine mind for himself, but, as the evidence above recounted shows a flood was adopted as the means to that end. The Hebrew laid upon human wickedness the cause of the flood and Noah, a just man and perfect, was selected to start the human race afresh.

At the conclusion of the great flood, the Hebrew story tells of Noah's worship of God, and his recognition of his dependence upon Jehovah. Whereupon a covenant is made with mankind, that not again should such a flood come. Nor has it. Not since then has any event of like nature taken place to give rise to records of all people of a flood — no story of the flood found among the primitive traditions, as far as we have met with, ever refer to two or more floods. The Genesis story of one great flood and the promise of none other like it is not contradicted. The rainbow in the sky, caused by the breaking up of sun beams and explained by modern knowledge of the refraction of light, stands today as a pledge unbroken.

Local Draft Board Powerless to Delay Induction

New Regulations Are Announced For Classification of Men With Dependents.

Except for unusual circumstances the Local Draft Board is powerless to delay induction after an Order to Report (Form 150) has been mailed to the registrant, Br. General Ames T. Brown, New York State Director of Selective Service, announced today.

The circumstances permitting possible postponement of induction are set out in Selective Service regulations as follows:

633.1 Order to Report to Report (Form 150) (b) The registrant, after reporting shall be called for induction ten days after the date he is mailed; provided, however, that in cases of death or extreme emergency to a person in the registrant's immediate family, serious illness of the registrant, or other extreme emergency beyond the registrant's control, the local board may, at the discretion of the Director (Form 150) has been issued, postpone the time when such report shall be made for a period not exceeding 60 days from the date of such postponement; subject, nevertheless, to such further postponement as may be ordered by the Director.

"It should be noted," Brown said, "that only an emergency will permit the Board to postpone its Order to Report for Induction. This is not to be confused with the local board's power to postpone a man's induction for purposes such as to settle his affairs or sell his property. The local board has no authority to grant such a request. With extreme emergency as specified in the regulations, the Local Board may cancel its order or postpone its order without a direct order from the Director or State Director of Selective Service."

New Regulations for Class III-B Registrants

A new policy for dependents has been announced which will divide registrants with dependents into six groups as follows:

Class III-A (1) Single men who do not contribute to the support of their dependents.

Class III-A (2) Married men who are not engaged in the support of their dependents.

Class III-A (3) Married men who are engaged in the support of their dependents.

Class III-B (1) Single dependents who contribute to the support of their dependents.

Class III-B (2) Married men who are engaged in the support of their dependents.

Class III-B (3) Married men who are engaged in the support of their dependents.

When it becomes necessary to replenish the pool of Class III-A-O men the local board shall consider the cases in the following order: First, potential registrants who are not yet registered; second, registrants of Class III-A (1); third, Class III-B (1); fourth, Class III-A (2); fifth, Class III-A (3); sixth, Class III-A (3); seventh, Class III-B (3).
