HOW, WHAT AND WHY?

Special to the Andover News

The Andover News has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State College of Agriculture and Home Economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope and mention the name of this paper you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one postcard. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

How to Clarify Fat

Fats that have been rendered in the home, or fats used for deep fat frying, or fats saved from meat stocks, soups, or stews can be clarified, that is, freed from objectionable odors, tastes, or colors.

A common method is to cook slices of potato in the fat, using one medium-sized potato cut in quarter-inch slices to each pound or pint of fat. Put the slices of potato into cooled fat. Heat the fat gradually until the slices of potato are well browned and the fat ceases to bubble.

Strain the fat through a fine mesh cloth placed over a strainer; when cool, cover the fat and keep it in a dark, cool place. The potato absorbs flavors and collects some sediment, and the remainder settles to the bottom of the kettle.

Another way to clarify fat, according to the New York State College of Home Economics, is: Melt the fat with an equal volume of water and boil it for a few minutes at a moderate temperature. Stir it occasionally. Strain it through a fine mesh cloth placed over a strainer. When the fat is cool and hardens remove the solid layer of fat, and scrape off any bits of meat and other materials that may adhere to the underside.

Save and use waste kitchen fats!

No Tin Pails for Canning Mrs. B. C. asks: "Can tin pails, such as corn sirup comes in from the store, be used for canning vegetables?"

The New York State College of Home Economics replies: "We do not recommend the use of tin pails for canning fruits and vegetables because it is impossible to get an air-tight seal with them. The sirups that are originally put up in these can keep because of a high sugar concentration."

Milkweed Products S. G. inquires: "Can milkweed be cultivated on a commercial basis?"

Prof. W. C. Muenschler of the Botany Department answers: "Experimental work is being done to determine the use of milkweed in the production of fiber and rubber, but the project has not advanced far enough for us to encourage anyone to undertake the growing of milkweed as a crop."

How to Grow Easter Lilies Mrs. J. A. writes: "How should Easter lilies be treated if planted out of doors?"

Prof. R. C. Allen of the Floriculture Department replies: "Easter lilies are not difficult to grow out of doors although some varieties are not hardy enough to stand our northern conditions. They should be planted in well drained and well prepared soil. They do best in full sun or semi-shade. During the winter they should be mulched with leaves, straw and similar materials as a means of protection."

Mistaken Identity A lady, apprehensive lest she pass her destination, poked the street car conductor with her umbrella. "Is that the First National Bank?" she asked.

"No, mum," replied the conductor, "them's my ribs."
