ISAAC PRACTICES PEACE

International Sunday School Lesson for August 16, 1942.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called sons of God." Matthew 5:9.

(Lesson Text: Genesis 26: 18-31.)

Our lesson today centers about Isaac and his love for peace. This patriarch has been minimized in retrospect because of the greatness of his father, Abraham, and of his son, Jacob. He was a man of superior ability, of great patience and perseverance and probably would have loomed larger if he had not been so closely associated with his greater predecessor and successor.

While Abraham and Jacob acted important parts in the history of the Jews, the role played by Isaac was just as noteworthy, although not as spectacular.

While we do not know a great deal about Isaac, we do know that he was the long-promised son of Abraham and Sarah. Early in life Isaac learned from his father the lesson of obedience to and trust in God, having willingly acquiesced in the apparent necessity of becoming a sacrifice at the divine command. Later, he married Rebekah, obtained for him by his father from their kinsmen in Haran, the old ancestral home, so that he would not inter-marry with the Canaanites. While Abraham wandered from place to place. Isaac was more settled. He was forced by famine to leave his home and go to Gerar, in the country which then belonged to Abimelech, King of the Philistines. While there he "waxed great and grew more and more until he became very great; and he had possessions of flocks and herds and a great household," so much so that the Philistines envied him. The Philistines, remember, were prior settlers in the land and they regarded the presence of the Hebrews as an intrusion upon their rights.

To curtail the prosperity of this foreigner, they resorted to the practice of destroying the wells which were so indispensable for the life of the cattle. Isaac had his servants to dig again the wells of water which his father Abraham had dug before him. So, time and again, we find these covetous neighbors presenting Isaac with the alternative of moving to another location or of attempting to live in the midst of a people whom they would have to constantly fight.

Isaac was by nature peace-loving, desirous of friendship and invariably he moved on, hunting new sites, rather than live in an atmosphere of contention. He abandoned a well named Esek, which meant contention, and moved on to another. For this the Philistines contended also, and Isaac named this well Sinnah, Hatred. From there he moved again and dug another well which he named Rehoboth, which meant room or enlargement, and here Isaac received assurances from God that this was the place he was to stay and that God would bless him here.

It is significant to note just what Isaac did immediately upon coming to Beersheba. First, he built an altar. Next, he talked, or prayed to God. Then he erected his tent. He dug a well that he, as well as others, might have an abundance of water. "Many people of our time, despite their high civilization, are far behind the humble Hebrew patriarch in the true ordering of their lives. Most of them see only their tent—the circle of their own interests; they have no place for either altar or well. They forget God who should be first in life, and the people of tomorrow who ought to benefit by their sojourn here. Others dig the well, thus providing a social blessing, but they have no place for an altar. The only true life is that which combines, and in the right order—altar, tent and well."

Isaac's attitude was prompted by his desire for quietness and peace, as well as by a strong faith in the providence of Jehovah. For aught that Isaac knew, these strivings at the well may have been God's way of keeping him moving until he finally reached the location for his life's efforts, which God in his judgement would be better able to select than Isaac, trusting to human selfishness and passion.

"The noblest kind of sacrifice is the self-denial of those who have the clearest rights," says J. Strachan. "Isaac was again and again placed in circumstances in which others would have quickly drawn the sword. The question arises whether he surrendered too much for the sake of peace. If a man cannot waive his rights without neglecting his duty, violating his conscience, surrendering his religion, losing his self-respect, betraying the rights of others, he is bound to resist. Otherwise, he may yield, and scarcely any price is too high to pay for peace."

Pvt. Howard C. Writes To "Wandering Willie" Agrees Whole-heartedly With Sergeant Cab's Opinions About "V. Tells Of Army Life"

The following letter to "Wandering Willie" was received from Pvt. Howard Gath, III, of Chautauque Field, Ill. in the 32nd Technical Squadron, U. S. Army A. Chan Frid

Dear "Willie": Well, Willie, to begin with, I tell you how much I enjoyed your column. I don't see how anybody can be so lucky to be with you in any way.

I have been following your correspondence with "Sarg" and I want you to know that I am the same as you are. I know you a little, because he has brought some points about your brother that I didn't know.

The only reason that I'm writing the time to write to you is I imagine "Cabe" causes full now directing of winning the war, and I want to listen to your ideas to see you lose a little of the outside world. I figured I might as well write a line as long as it does anything to mail it. If I don't pay postage I can't be sure that three lines are spent than to mail you.

I'm glad that folks tell you to take time out of your mail to you. It's true you couldn't have had to go to school like the old. In fact, I like it still at it).

I'm going to give you what Uncle Sam has got out here. First of all, you don't think there is a war on, do you? U. S. is at war with Germany and Italy and anybody who says they can lick us, they're going to win this war. (Have you ever seen one of those bunches of us fellows school around the country what they are made of, keep them running. I'm a machinist. The mechanics school and a

I go to school from 7:00 to 10:00 at night the rest of the time work in the afternoon around again. Do you know I didn't think you couldn't figure out why I'm all of this. You probably Chautauque Field is a big cows grazing on it.

We are located here town called Rantoul, Illinois. I remember "Shovel Ho" has sidewalks and the shoes. But they tell gets just as deep here the Hollow.

It's too bad, Willie, never been given the chance to get out of "Shovel Ho" would do you a lot of you ever got the name "Willie" is more than I'm from roaming around up there.

I have been "to town" so far. Rantoul on a chair factory. The walk around the town three—they run around. They have to so everybody can be at once.

Well, you old draft used up about all the money that I can afford to ring off and the folks. I hope to any association with too big a blow for the fore I came in the your equal in the A. If you can find some time, you dictate my dress on it, tho, or me out up here.
