Louisa's Letter

Dear Louisa:
I am a bride and am thinking of going to the town where my husband is stationed. As long as he was in the camp near my home town I stayed with my parents and he came in on the week-end and several time during the week. But now he has been transferred about five hundred miles away near a big city.

My parents object to my going because they think I will be so lonely with him away most of the time. Another problem will be finances as he doesn't make much money and I understand that the living expenses are so high in the city. But he keeps on begging me to come and I just don't know what to do. What would you advise?

RUBY T. — Mich.

Answer:
If you are prepared to hold down a job of any kind, it seems to me that the simplest solution of your problem is to try and get some work that you can do in the city near your husband's camp. That would give you something to do while he was away — thus keeping you from getting lonely and homesick. It would also help out your income and keep you both from worrying about the wolf at your door.

There are so many jobs waiting to be done that it is not as hard to get work now as it usually is. You will also feel that you are helping your country win the war by working instead of being idle. Good luck.

LOUISA.

Dead Louisa:
My daughter adores her teacher. She tries to dress and act like her. She also keeps her picture in her room. Do you think this is a wholesome thing?

MOTHER — Wis.

Answer:
All girls and boys go through a period of hero or heroine worship. It does them no harm and it serves a good purpose if the object of their affection happens to be a fine person.

Some girls have movie actresses as their ideals, or older girls and women. You are fortunate if the teacher your daughter adores is a nice, sensible woman.

LOUISA.

What you put off today you will likely put off tomorrow.
