too late

Regardless of distance from home shores, our fighting men must receive a steady stream of supplies and equipment. And convoys are carefully scheduled to reach them on exact timing.

For more than two years, Erie and other American railroads have been meeting the timing of convoy sailings. Troops, equipment, and supplies must arrive exactly when they are needed for loading so there will be no congestion-no delays.

Timing is of the utmost importance on both the battlefront and homefront.

The timing of your War Bond purchases is of great importance, too. Right now, today, your government needs your loan to help keep supplies of vital war materials flowing to our men so they will never have too little-too late.
