Question 1 .-- How can dandelions be kept out of the lawn? Is pha compounds and such antithere a chemical which will kill biotics as penicillin which are su-aluminum percolator, study desk, the weeds but not the grass?

Answer.—When a lawn became too heavily infested with weeds there really wasn't much to do about it. Until very recently the best thing was to plow it up and start over again. Now there seems to be a very good chance that everyone can own a beautiful, weedless lawn if it is, at this hope comes from recent reports on tests made last summer at the Cornell experiment station on the

This chemical is a close relative been shown to be so effective where used in a synthetic form in stimulating the growth of new roots a whole series of these chemical many of them are very useful to
