Civil War Speeded Advance Communication

Extensive use of the telephone in war stems from experimental work begun in 1878, when the signal corps laid a 40-mile field line at Fort Whipple, now Fort Myer, Va. The telephone became the standard Spicer was in mode of communication between the chief signal officer.

In Producing Sound

The human voice is the most versatile of the sound-producing devices and notwithstanding extensive efforts, its many shades of tone cannot be duplicated faithfully by mechanical means, according to re-| searchists.

Human speech is created by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hyland and vibration of the vocal chord, whose Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Protect Blankets

The end of the blanket which tucks under the chin and over the shoulders usually suffers most from soil and wear. It is much easier on the homemaker as well as the blankets and comforts to protect them rather than to clean or launder. Such a protector or shield may be made of any cuitable soft washable cloth to fit the end of the blanket and extend down to a depth of six to ten inches. Sew the protector up like a pillow case, slip it on and baste its lower edge with a strong thread to the covering, being sure to catch both top and bottom of the protector. If one prefers, and can get the material, a full-length protector may be made, but for ordinary purposes the short protector is quite satisfactory, easy to remove, to wash and to replace, and greatly extends the life Order FLOWERS Here of the blankets or other heavy covering.
