OPA Asks Housewives To Fight Inflation

To enlist consumers aid in preventing food price increases, Price Administrator Chester Bowles announced that "Anti-Inflation Shopping Lists" will be distributed to thousands of housewives from local War Price and Rationing Boards beginning the first week of September.

"The OPA is calling upon housewives to help their Government prevent a repetition of the disastrous inflation that followed the first World War," Mr. Bowles explains. "The same set of factors that started the inflationary spiral following that war are again here. Consumer goods, including certain foods, are scarce. Everyone wants to buy the things he couldn't get during the war and people have money to spend."

"We are going to do everything in our power to prevent price increases in cost of living items by maintaining price controls as long as they are needed. We can't do the job alone. We want housewives to write on the Anti-Inflation Shopping Lists the prices they have actually paid for various kinds of food over a period of a week. The housewife will send her report to her local board. This will give the board a pretty good picture of food price compliance in its area and point out some of the stores that need investigation."

Buddy (aged seven)—"We're going to have a roast chicken for dinner."

Older sister—"You overheard mother say so."

Buddy—"No, I oversmelled it cooking."

Meat, Butter, Cheese Point Value Down

Point values for nearly all meats, all cheeses, creamery butter, and margarine will be reduced sharply and canned milk will be a point-free during the rationing period beginning September 2 and ending September 29, Chester Bowles, administrator of OPA, says.

Steaks and roasts will be from two to three points less a pound; hamburger will be a two-points per pound bargain, down from 4; and reductions for cuts of lamb and veal range from one to three points. Pork steaks, chops and roasts are down one to two points; all bacon is down two points, and spareribs are down three points. Nearly all meats that now have a value of two or three points a pound are reduced one point. The new point value for creamery butter is 12 points a pound. Margarine is down from 14 to 12 points a pound. Points for all kinds of rationed cheese have been cut 50 per cent.

SPB Stops Allocation of Trucks to Farmers

The Surplus Property Board has ceased allocating surplus trucks to farmers and farm co-operatives and will release, for regular disposal, trucks, recently allocated to farmers and not yet sold, it was announced by the Board. Farmers who wish to purchase surplus trucks should contact a local truck dealer as the vehicles will be disposed of through normal channels, with no need for certification.
