WANDERING WITH WILLIE

IT SEEMS queer that some folks never change—except from tight to tighter. The same fellows who walked up to the ball park for the past summers and never divvied over a penny are now doing the same up at the school building every time the new American Legion team plays a game—just because the boys are nice enough about it to only take up a collection.

We wish there was some way to rig up a huge mirror so that you penny pinchers could see the expressions on your faces when you are not trying to see the hat.

P.S.—If you are broke, we know doggone well that managers Francis and Lenford will reach in and give you guys a handful. That's the way the Legionnaires have been playing ball this year.

THANKS, Rochester, for the nice little compliment that drifted down this way from your fair city. Next time you're down we will let you buy us a Coca-Cola for that.

LONG ago Barnum said there was one born every minute, but being a gentleman and a scholar, we wouldn't dream of calling anyone a name like that, so we will simply say "bum sport." (Reference: a recent game played against the county house town and which stirred up such a stir by local citizens, very few in number.)

DID you folks know we now are almost on the verge of a flour shortage, or did you notice? The rate some of our local piggy banks are buying it up, we are going to be eating spuds before the week is over—if those folks don't run out of cash first.

The best one we had drawn to our attention was a rural lady, armed with the family pick-up truck, who made the rounds and yep, bought flour, and as her money was Grade A she got, yep, flour, and lots of it. She stepped into a store and wanted to know if she could buy a barrel of it, but the storekeeper was very sorry as they had no flour in barrels, so she settled for eight sacks (1 barrel, American). However, on taking the flour out to the truck the poor gink had to pile the eight sacks on top of 16 that she already had covered in the back of the truck.

We would suggest, lady, that you sift your flour every morning before breakfast, as by sifting you can keep the weevils out, but don't forget that weevil larvae can't be sifted, and it has a funny habit of making weevils.

But the best plan would be to start serving pancakes, and biscuits, and we mean serving—big round ones, square ones and oblong ones, but just make sure they contain lots of flour, or you will be like the female we mentioned a year or so ago who could not understand what happened to all the coffee she had piled up, when she discovered little creatures playing baseball in it.

AND down in New York the folks are bothered with butter, the ceiling evidently having blown its top. A local woman writes that she was able to get a quarter pound last week, and it only cost her 29 cents, or $1.16 a pound. Oleo must take swell down there.
