New Sleeves for Old
If your favorite wool dress is wearing out around the sleeves, here's a suggestion which will not only prolong its life, but also give it that new look. Take out the old sleeves and put in new ones, using the popular square armholes. These are set in on the dress a bit, and will cut out the weak, thin part of the garment.
For the new sleeves you can use a harmonizing shade of the same color, or even a print. And the material might be rayon, crepe or jersey instead of wool.

Foods on Plentiful List
It looks as if another chorus of the "sugar blues" is due because world production of sugar in 1945-46 is expected to fall below that of last year. Even though the production of sugar in the Western Hemisphere is higher than a year ago, it has been more than offset by sharp production decreases in the Far East, Africa, Europe, Australia and the islands of the Pacific.

The Old Soak
Time can be saved in the kitchen after a meal if you remember to fill your cooking dishes with water immediately after they are used, and let them soak until washed. Use cold water to loosen starchy foods such as dough or cereal, and for eggs and milk. Use hot water to soap pans that have had sugary foods in them. Wipe greasy pans with paper, then soak them in a solution of baking soda and water.

Rich Garbage
Despite the shortages of various food items, America still throws away the richest garbage in the world. None of us is deliberately wasteful, yet the garbage cans continue to fill up.
Secretary of Agriculture Anderson says that every pound of food saved is just as good as a pound of extra food produced. Help by seeing that no food is wasted, either on the table or in the kitchen.

It was the fourth inning when the couple reached the ball park. "What's the score?" the boy friend asked of a fan. "Nothing to nothing." "Oh, steady steady!" called the girl friend. "We haven't missed a thing, have we?"

Leon Benjamin Is Re-elected to State Office

Leon Benjamin of Cuba, and for three years a director of the Allegany County Soil Conservation District, has been re-elected chairman of the State Soil Conservation committee.
The work of this committee in administering the State Soil Conservation Districts law and assisting districts is becoming more and more important since there are now 30 County Soil Conservation Districts in New York State.
Mr. Benjamin reports that the Allegany County District has just completed four years of active field operations assisting farmers plan erosion control and water conservation measures and are now engaged in working with several hundred farmers.
