Like all other businessmen, large or small, they depend upon efficient railroad transpor-

To keep America "in business" with progressive, low-cost transportation, the railroads must match the steady growth of American industry. But here are the obstacles which must be overcome:

keep their business thriving.

Since 1939 payrolis are up more than 48.7% Costs of supplies and materials are up 87.7% Freight rate increases average only 26.0%

Under these circumstances—even with the recent emergency 10% freight-rate increase, and even though they are carrying the largest volume of freight in history—the railroads expect to earn only about 3% on their investment in 1947.

Ast so exist se a self-supporting exterprise -to provide for expension and growth, most people agree that any business must cara

Your railroads are now asking for the opportumity to earn that 6%, so that they can provide. America with continued, improved service.
