Editor's Corner " Are You The Litter Bug?".

by Clair Goodridge Calling all bottle and junk collectors; the farmers that live next to roadsides have a fine collection of refuse. In fact, a whole winter's supply. to collect-these choice little tidbits but they had no alterative you see, they were dropped into the farmer's fields by a new kind of insect that was sprouted as a result of the motor age, the litter

The litter bug is fought in parks by posters and in urban areas with ordinances and trash cans but he runs unchecked through the countryside.

Often the litter bug doesn't realize how dangerous he can be. Not only does he destroy the beauty of the landscape with his bottles, cans, and waste paper, but he seriously endangers the If the yearly expenses caused by these insects were totaled the sum would be staggering.

Anyone who has any common sense should know how hard it to see a bottle, can or sack of waste in a field of hay. If the section blades of a mower should hit one of these cans, the time cost to repair the damage and the money for the broken part would well warrent a punch in the nose to the "bug" that threw the can or paper so carelessly aside. The large fluid tractor tires are not cheaply bought. For the cost of ones of those tires you could buy enough tires to completely retire your car (including spare) and have money left over, but people still throw their bottles into the fields along the roadside.

Remember if you are a litter bug, the farmer's field is not a " - trash can, it is his place of business. He works from dawn to dark to feed the nation from the place of business and I think he deserves a little consideration. won't inconvenience anyone too much to hold their trash until he can find an appropriate receptical or an appointed dumping area.
