Defense And You by Joyce Day

The fact is dawning on the American public that Russia is no longer the backward land of past but is fast becoming a ism is waking up, and the leaders. of America realize only too well, the importance of this action. munism as opposed to democracy s an old subject to practically children. The trouble is, it's been drummed into our heads until it no longer has no real importance but shrug it off with "So What-That's Washington's Headache."

Such an attitude would be fine were congressmen or government officials. Unfortunately a good up of people who are content to be mere spectators in the present missile race. Such feeling is as ridiculous as having a football team try to win a game by sitting poorly with one for nine attempts on the sidelines. They could cheer and jump up and down all they a chance of winning until they left the sidelines, got in the game, and played.

The American people must also leave the sidelines if they expect to win over Russia. Only with every person working to do his best and praying for peace, can democracy emerge Let's make this our goal really live for it in these "years of crisis."

the first half with the Panthers leading at the buzzer by a single point. In the last two quarters the lead seesawed back and forth many times yet with only fifteen ----to-us. We realize it as a fact, points for the local quintet and eighteen for the visitors. It was probably the best defensive-wise game of the season with Common and Howland rebounding beautifully. McAndrew stole the ball repeatedly but the Panthers just couldn't sink the needed buckets. The game was probably lost on the foul line for Andover who made only seven out of twentytwo attempts. J.V.'s Lose To Cuba by Gary Rosintoski

The Andover J. V.'s lost a hard fought game to a superior Cuba team last Friday on the local court The scoring was fairly even during the first quarter with Cuba leading by four points at the buzzer. During the next quarter the Andover boys couldn't hit on the shots, getting only five points to fifteen for the visitors. The third period was even worse with the local quintet only getting one bucket while Cuba again scored fifteen. But the local boys came back strong and determined but could only score fourteen while Cuba with its impenatrable lead scored the same. Andover's scoring was led by Woodard and Harris who had six apiece. Thorp was next three while Hann, Lewis, Dixon, Conde, and Seamans scored two Greene led the scoring for Cuba with nineteen points while Robinson and Kessler had fourteen

Getting the right amount and the right kind of food is especially important during adolescence. Fast growing boys and girls need food to build their enlarging bodies and supply the great amounts of energy they are ordinarily using up. Before the period of their rapid growth sets in, they need food for an additional reasonto store protein and calcium for new muscle and bone growth.

The critical importance of nu-Jan. 12: To Mr. and Mrs. Elmer trition during the adolescent years was illustrated by Dr. Jean Mayer, a Harvard nutritionist, in a recent talk at Children's Hospital's dedication program. Referring to the effects of a meager diet on the French people during World War Benjamin of Belmont and Doug-II, Dr. Mayer said that while older people and young children suffered during the period of deprivation, they quickly made up for deficiencies once their diet was restored to normal after the war. Children even caught up with growth that had been retarded. Adelescents, however, who were deprived of their food requirements during the war were not able to catch up on their growth.
