To Parents Of Working Children

Most parents will not lose the $600 exemption they may claim on their Federal income tax returns for each dependent child spending the summer vacation at a part-time job, E. C. Coyle, Jr., District Director of Internal Revenue, said today.

Children who will still be under 19 years of age at the end of the year, and children who are fulltime students, regardless of age, come under this special exemption rule of the Federal income tax

Mr. Coyle explained that parents who contribute more than half the support of a child in one of these categories may claim a dependency exemption regardless of the amount earned by the child. He also had a good word for the working children. They are entitled to a $600 personal exemption and may be due a refund of part or all the Federal income tax withheld from their wages. They will have to file an income tax return, Mr. Coyle said, claiming refund of any amount withheld in excess of the actual tax liability. Amy questions concerning individual cases can be answered at local Internal Revenue offices, Mr.
