Stay In School by Judie Baker

If you've ever wondered what it might find out. It won't be any news to you that most of us aren't going to like it very much. Then why are so many high school students storming ahead and joining various branches of the Armed Forces without completing their education?

The "long viewpoint" on this problem seems to hold the answer. The smarter or wiser set of this younger generation is shooting for this view as it involves finishing school. "The short view" seems to involve a get-rich quick scheme. It would be a loteasier on teachers if it were only prize knuckleheads that wave good bye to education. But the plain fact is that many who leave are basicallly as smart as the valedictorian of their class. These students don't know the score and are rather involved in complicaby Jean Updyke Autumn is here. Some people call this-time of year the season of grief since this season brings the biting frost that kills flowers, leaves and the grass in the meadow, pasture, and lawn.

But to me, Autumn is a time of rest. The harvest is in, the barn is full, and the farm work is done. Waldeck, Ber Eller enjoy the result of the summer's

It is the time for walking along the street and rustling the leaves, of Thanksgiving with pumpkin pies, turkey, and cranberry jelly. It is the time to bring out the woolen clothes for winter, to put plaster around the windows and to do fall plowing. Yes. Autumn is not the time for grief but the time of beauty.
