New Loan Program On Water Supplies

Water supplies to meet future community needs throughout New York can now be cost-shared with the Federal Government. The new financial arrangement is a feature added to small watershed projects, according to Irving B. Stafford, State Conservations for the U. S. Soil Conservation Service, at Syracuse.

Towns and cities planning to build flood prevention dams can thus increase their capacity to take care of stepped-up water demands by industry and municipalities. Long range increases in population and economic growth are expected to place a heavy drain on present reservoirs. Up to 30 percent Federal financing through agencies of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture has been made available to store water for future emergencies.

The loans are earmarked for local sponsors receiving technical assistance under the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention
