SELF CONTROL—A TRUE ART
by Lee Kessler

For those of us who appreciate authentic values, there is an art which is often neglected, one which is far greater to master than all others. What is the art of self-control.

Too often, student and adults alike "fly-off the handle" and hurl insulting remarks at friends. Their tempers flare, and friends bear the heavy brunt of their wrath.

Although these impulsive outbursts are rare, and by no means a common facet of their personalities, they often cause permanent damage to one's reputation and prestige.

It is for this reason that we must try to curb our anxieties before we hurt ourselves, or more important, someone else. By initiating concern for others, and always maintaining this, we'll learn to control our own actions, and ultimately grow more mature and wise.

Therefore, the next time we are tempted to lash out, we must remember the damage we can do to a friendship and to our personalities. We must hold back that anger, and attempt to always put the "other fellows" feelings before ours. If we do this, we'll somewhat master the difficult art of self-control.

Downbeats

Last Saturday morning found four Andover instrumentalists piling into the school car for a ride to Johnson City where they played solos. Andover emerged victorious with very high ratings. They are as follows: Don Harvey—Baritone A-6 and String Bass A-5; Mary Ellen Smith—Trombone, B-4; Lee Kessler—Trombone A-6; Dianne Vars, Cornet A-6. These solos are among the most difficult written for high school competition, so A. C. S. should be especially proud of these students.

The Andover Central School Orchestra and Chorus announce that on the nights of June 23rd and 24th, they will be privileged to participate in the Baccalaureate Services and Commencement at Andover Central School. On the night of the 23rd, the chorus will sing "O God Creator Blest" and on the night of the 24th they will sing "You'll Never Walk Alone."

Also on the same nights, the Orchestra will play "March Militaire" and "Pomp and Circumstance" on Commencement night.

FHA Members Hold Mother and Daughter Banquet

Last Wednesday, 112 mothers and daughters were served a turkey dinner at the Annual FHA Mother and Daughter Banquet, held in the cafeteria. Senior Interviews

"Oh, posh", is the favorite saying of this week's subject, Miss Margaret Lynne Sootheran. Living at 26 Elm Street with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald J. Sootheran, she is the sister of Joan aged 22, Beth, 20 and David, 11.

Lynne, as she is known to her classmates, has played flute in the Senior Band for two years, sung in Chorus for three years, and written for the Hi Herald for three years. She has also been active in Library Council for three years, being its president last year and treasurer this year. She was in Camera Club one year.

Outside of her school activities Lynne finds time to be treasurer of the Presbyterian Youth Fellowship and a member of the Presbyterian choir. Her favorite food is rhubarb pie, and blue is her favorite color. She likes to spend her spare time playing tennis and swimming. Math and science has been her major, although she prefers history of all her subjects. Her outlook on life is to abide by the Golden Rule and live the best life possible.

Her future plans are to major in history at Macalester College, St. Paul, Minn., and earn a teaching certificate.

The senior to be interviewed this week is Elwin Earl Schoonover who lives with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Schoonover of Elm Valley. He has one brother and sister, Kenneth and Connie Lee Heselton.

Elwin was born June 27, 1945, in Wellsville. Throughout high school, he has majored in science. The activities which he has participated in are: Camera Club, three years; Hi Herald, three years; Chorus, four years; band, six years; marching band, six years; Dance Band, six years and Pep Band. He has also played basketball, baseball and soccer for one year each.

Elwin's favorites include: food, pizza; color, blue; subject, English; pastime, hunting and fishing; sport, baseball; and car, Pontiac. His pet peeve is someone who invites you to do something and then changes his or her mind at the last minute. His philosophy of life is "live your life in the present and not in the future."

After graduation, Elwin plans to enlist in the Air Force where he hopes to become a member of the Air Force Band.

Teen Talk

Someone has very foolishly allotted me this space to write Teen Talk this week. I would think that someone would be aware of the fact that each time I have been assigned this article, I use the spot to air my many bones of contention. Perhaps I am being used to do what someone doesn't quite dare to do.

Oh well, that is neither here nor there. After many moments of intense concentration, I have decided whom I will victimize. Of course, it is always that opposite sex I find fault with, since I don't seem to be able to collect any "dirt" on my side of the fence. Read on to see what your latest "sin" is.

It is now the month of June. The days are warm and the whole world waits with the awareness of summer approaching. Little Sally Buttercup is no exception to the rule. Each day she awakens and wonders what this day will bring. She starts off to school with a spring in her step. Why shouldn't she be happy, school is almost out and the entire summer is ahead. She gets as far as the school driveway without anything unusual happening. Half dreaming about what dress she will wear to the dance, she very carefully looks to see if a bus is in sight. Assured of her safety, Sally proceeds. However, she forgot about the "other half." Swishing down on her, endangering life and limb, is Guy Goon and his brand new bicycle. If there is a puddle there, he laughs extra hard but just a little dust bowl makes his day complete. It doesn't matter about Sally's clean clothes, much less her disposition.

Sally is a decent sort though. She doesn't let this upset her, nor the fact that some fool has "steeked" her locker. She busily starts out for her next class. In case you already know, the bell signaling the class change also marks the stampede of the herd through the pass or gold rush. Nevertheless, poor Sally is pinned against the wall with her books over a ten mile darius. This is cause for a round of guffaws while the "gentlemen" watch Sally pick up her books.

The rest of the morning goes fairly well despite being pelleted with about twenty paperwads in study hall. On her way home to lunch, she by-passes the school driveway, hoping to miss the bicycle crowd, only to be sideswiped by Reckless Roy in his hotrod. She realizes boys like to show off, but isn't this just a bit too much?

The afternoon is usually a repeat performance of the morning. When the bell rings at night, Sally considers herself wise to remain the last one out of the room in order to miss being sandwiched between all of the children (boy) who are so anxious to get home to Mother.

It would be nice if she could quietly sneak home, but there is probably someone (boy) walking on her heels. This of course, is supposed to bring Sally to her knees in helpless laughter. The final straw comes when she reaches the Post Office only to have the door shut in her face by you guessed it—a boy.

I guess the only thing to do is to fight back, girls. These boys are very obviously not going to change for us, besides they are so funny the way they are. I'll see you in school with my load of paperwads. Don't forget to ride your bicycle to school!
