Greenwood Central School News

The Annual Meeting of Greenwood Central School District No. 1 was held Tuesday evening, July 9, at 8:30 p. m., with 28 voters present. The meeting was called to order by Lloyd Chaffee, President of the Board of Education.

Virgil Hussey, District Superintendent of Schools, was appointed Chairman and read the annual letter from Commissioner John E. Allen, Jr. The call of the meeting was read and the minutes kept by Mrs. Marjorie Matthews, Clerk for the Board.

A budget of $300,452.83 was approved by the voters as was the purchase of a new bus not exceeding $6,750 before trade-in.

Richard York was reelected to a five-year term on the Board of Education.

The 60th Annual Commencement exercises of the Greenwood Central School saw the awarding of diplomas to seventeen seniors by Lloyd Chaffee, President of the Board of Education. Graduating were: Roger Streeter, president; Gary Margaram, vice-president; Gloria Wallace, secretary; Elsie Koehler, treasurer; Cheryl Hussey, Student Council Representative; Elaine Holt Allen, Nelson Brewster, Linda Cady, Clifford Cole, Alberta Woodworth Creeley, Gordon Herrick, James Kernan, Phyllis Leonard, Barbara McCaffrey, Donna Mullen, Eugene Ormsby, and Betty Pease.

Following the Processional and Invocation by Rev. Robert Kress, the co-salutatorian's address was given by Cheryl Hussey. She stressed education is something done by a person. Success in education depends not only upon the "I.Q." but the "I Will" in education. She pointed out that the tasks of a teacher are not easy and saluted them for having fired the enthusiasm for learning.

Nelson Brewster, co-salutatorian, emphasized the privilege we have in America and the challenge to improve our country. To begin with, we should improve ourselves, since we are the people that make-up the country.

In the co-valedictorians address Clifford Cole spoke on the rising trend of Socialism and how it is affecting the individual American. Elsie Koehler, co-valedictorian, outlined the danger of depending on others for one's success.

The class was addressed by Dr. F. Gordon Stocklin, chairman of the Division of Foreign Languages, Houghton College. In his topic of "Bare-headed?", he expressed how to face realistically a healthy attitude toward work, its value and the privilege of our freedom in which to do it; abundance-tendency of most people to live by what they desire, not by what they know; and God-the religious background of our forefathers with the concept that every person is important because he is a child of God. The proper attitudes on these things are basics in the personal success of the individual in his future and so too, for the nation.

Awards were presented to Seniors by Robert Hoagland, vice, principal. The awards were: Bal-four Award to Nelson Brewster; Babe Ruth award to Cheryl Hussey and Roger Streeter; Lillian Bird Memorial English award to Nelson Brewster; DAR Citizenship award to Cheryl Hussey; First State Bank of Canisteo award to Betty Pease; Elaine Allen for Home-making; Proctor and Gamble award in Homemaking to Barbara McCaffrey; American Agriculturist in Agriculture to James Kernan; Certificate in excellence in Farm Mechanics to James Kernan; Driver Education award to Betty Pease; Betty Crocker award to Donna Mullen; Class of '61 Endowment Awards to Donna Mullen and Gloria Wallace; Home-School Club Commercial award to Alberta Creeley; Music to Elsie Koehler, and Athletics to Clifford Cole; Danforth Foundation awards to Gordon Herrick and Phyllis Leonard; and Student of the Month letter award to Elaine Allen.

Souvenirs Can Be Dangerous

Innocent-looking souvenirs are sometimes dangerous—if they are agricultural products.

To prevent prohibited plants and meat from entering the U. S., plant and animal quarantine inspectors of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture work with Federal customs and immigration officials to examine incoming traffic and agricultural products at ports of entry.

One passenger was bringing a small packet of herbs as a gift to a friend for use in brewing tea. Hitchhiking in the herbs was a snail that causes extensive crop damage in Europe.

Another passenger, who had been on a field trip in Ireland, carried his boots in his suitcase. A plant quarantine inspector at Boston removed two ounces of soil from the field boots and found in the mud a cyst of the golden nematode, a deadly enemy of potatoes and tomatoes.

Numerous souvenirs — such as dolls with heads carved from dried fruit—have been found carrying serious plant pests.

Plant and animal pests come on ships, on planes, on mud stuck to automobiles, on nursery stock, and in shipments of grain and cattle; but more than half of them are brought over in passenger luggage.

In a recent year, government officials inspected nearly 23 million pieces of incoming baggage—an average of one inspection every 1½ seconds. More than 323,000 lots of prohibited plant materials were seized.
