coming available daily in Moscow. 5. We were told that there are 9 churches holding services in Moscow, most of them being the Russian Orthodox church. Other church buildings have been converted to museums or other public uses. The one protestant church is a Baptist congregation which employs 10 paid ministers and has a Sunday morning attendance of over 2,000 with 1,200 to 1,500 attending evening services on Sunday and three other nights during the week. They are not permitted to have Sunday school or other youth education programs nor are they allowed to hold services outside of the church. They are unable to expand their program because they cannot secure space. The ministers are permitted to make visits to individuals.

The building being used by the congregation was about the size of a large country church designed to seat approximately 300 to 500 people. The large attendance at services is possible only because the people stand tightly packed in the aisles, in the vestibule and in all available space around the altar and the choir loft and elsewhere.

6. One of the striking aspects of the Moscow scene was the absence of children. Almost no children were in evidence and we were told that they were all in "pioneer camps" or rest camps or rest homes. Apparently, these facilities are provided by various trade unions in cooperation with the industrial plant where workers are employed or by the government itself. The camps are out of Moscow at lakes and in resort areas. Many of them appear to have facilities for the parents who can visit the children on week-ends.

Nursery are provided for the children of working mothers, so it is evident that the youth of time until they reach working age. The father and mother in almost every family are working.

7. Another striking aspect of the nation are in the hands of the government a good deal of the life in the Soviet Union is the large number of workmen working at all sorts of jobs from truck driving to manual labor in the streets and on construction crews.

8. Miscellaneous bits of information from various sources:
 a. The school year extends from September 1 through May 1 with many of the schools operating with two shifts a day. One from 9 a. m. to 2 p. m. and one from 3 p. m. to 8 p. m. Youngsters start school at 7 years of age. The hope is expressed that in the future schools will operate only in the morning with the afternoon left free for study and for sports

b. One of the guides lives in a two-room apartment for four people. The space plus electricity and gas costs approximately $10 per month.

c. No gas stations are in evidence on the main streets. We were told that they are located on back streets and at distances of about every three and a half miles in the suburbs. However, a map of Moscow lists the address of filling station and indicates only nine of them. It also gives the octaine of the gasoline sold at each station. It ranged from 56 at some stations to a high of 93 at two stations. 70 to 74 seemed to be the most common octane. (In fairness it should be pointed out that these were the stations which "sold petrol for cash." There may have been other stations.)

d. Soviet citizens are not allowed to move to Moscow without special permission because of the guest speaker for the Adult Class. You will enjoy this class. We invite all the family to come to this service.

11:00 a. m. Morning Worship. Dr. Bert Hall, professor at Houghton College will be the speaker of the morning. He has a message from God for each one of us. This service will be an inspiration to you, and a warm welcome awaits you. Come and worship with us.

e. A voiga car in Moscow, which is a small car about like the Volkswagon, sells for about $4,400.

f. We were told that a family of four could get two rooms and a veranda at a seashore at a cost of 100 rubles (about $110) for 2 1/2 months.

g. A family with more than three children receives a certain amount of subsidy for each child from the state. Russians pay 6% income tax plus an 8% "no child" tax if they have no children by age 23 or less than three children by age 30.

h. Few, if any, people carry life insurance.

i. In the next 10 to 15 years, it is anticipated that apartment houses and other group living arrangements will be free of cost. It is also anticipated that public transportation will be supplied free of charge.

j. Eggs were seen selling in Moscow and other places for about 9c each.

k. Quick estimates made as some of the group rode the subway escalators were that the escalators were 400 feet long.

Sightseeing in Moscow

1. Red Square and the Kremlin. We were told that over 50,000 people a day go through the Mausoleum in which Lenin's body is preserved. The line that we saw extended through Red Square and into the park and must have been over a mile in length. The tomb is closed to the public on Mondays and Thursdays. Tourists, under the guidance of Intourist, are permitted to enter the line near the Mausoleum at about mid-day. One of the points of interest was the grave in which Stalin's body is now resting in the landscaped area back of Lenin's Tomb. It was one of the few graves not marked by any statue or other ornaments.

2. Other Buildings Seen in the Red Square and the Kremlin Gum Department Store, The Saint Basil Cathedral, the Kremlin Theatre, the Grand Kremlin Palace, the Palace of Congresses, which is a new modern building built to accommodate large meetings (up to 6,000 people) which could not be accommodated in any of the older buildings; the History Museum, the Archangel Cathedral, the Cathedral of Assumption and the Cathedral of Annunciation. Other items of interest inside the Kremlin were the Tsar Bell which is nearly 20 feet high and weighs 200 tons. Nearby stands the Tsar Cannon which weighs 30 tons and is over 15 feet in length. The bell has never rung, the cannon has never been fired. The Lenin library at one end of Red Square had 20 million volumes, we were told, in 47 foreign languages.

The museum included many relics of ancient times and indicates the elegance of the living enjoyed by the privileged few prior to the revolution.

3. The University is one of the largest institutions of its kind. It was built between 1948 and 1953 on the banks of the Moscow River. It is attended by 30,000 students. Ten stories of one wing served as the library.
