Many carriers laid at anchor in the harbor, planes were down, sitting unaware in the hangers. Pearl Harbor was peaceful and calm that morning. Not for long though; this day was soon to be recorded in the pages of American History. Soon the rallying cry of American troops would be, "Remember Pearl Harbor!"

Saturday, December seventh is the twenty-second anniversary of Pearl Harbor. Yes, this is the twenty-second anniversary of our entry into World War II and the preservation of our freedom. Many lives and much money were lost for a cause that we should appreciate today.

At this time we should all give thanks that our fellow Americans and Allies preserved our present-day freedom and liberty. Had they not so struggled, we certainly wouldn't be living in the United States we know today: A wonderful country of free enterprise and democracy. These precious "gifts" came to us via the Bill of Rights and have been sustained through the years although the way sometimes led across the bloody battlefield. Pearl Harbor was another such crossroad in our history of struggling to be free.

May we ever be free, and may we never fear to struggle if need be to preserve and defend ourselves and any oppressed people of the world.

Purple And White

by Dan Smith

Last Tuesday, November 26, Andover traveled to Friendship only to be dismayed by the Friendship five in both games. In the J.V. game, Bill Wahl connected for ten points to take honors for Andover, while Dave Vickers and Dave Alvord dumped in six. The score by quarters was:

Andover-10-15-23-30

Friendship-5-14-28-34

While the Varsity was smothered by seventeen points, the J.V.'s were downed by only four. Wahl and Rose took scoring honors for the game with twenty and ten respectively. For Andover, Cannon and Mulholland both dumped in nine points while Ike Connor had seven. The outcome of the game seemed to result from a bad first half in which Andover only scored ten points while Friendship scored twenty-six. The score by quarters was:

Andover-4-10-22-33

Friendship-12-26-37-50

Andover looked better in the second half, but the sixteen point margin was too great for the Andover five to close.
