Shortly after the assassination of President Kennedy, Jim Bishop, author of the book, "The Day Lincoln Was Shot", wrote in his daily column a comparison of the lives of the two great presidents, Abraham Lincoln and John Fitzgerald Kennedy. Bishop likened the lives of the two men in ways which stunned the reader.

Lincoln was elected in 1860; Kennedy in 1960, one hundred years later. Lincoln and Kennedy married younger women. Both men were preceded in death by two children. Almost ironically, Lincoln was guarded in New York City by a policeman named Kennedy. John Kennedy's secretary's name was Evelyn Lincoln. Lincoln and Kennedy were both firm believers in equality for all races. Lincoln and Kennedy both dreamed of death and realized that if anyone wanted to kill the President, it could be done if planned carefully. As a climax, both men were killed by a single shot in the head. Again the two great Presidents were succeeded in office by Southerners named Johnson.

This year as the anniversary of Lincoln's birthday arrives it, is difficult to think only of Abraham Lincoln. Our minds naturally seem to gravitate toward the tragedy of last November. Anniversaries are for remembering, but may we hope and pray that there will never be others added to the list of martyred Presidents.

Feature

"Oft have I heard both youths and virgins say, Birds chose their mates and couple on this day. But by their flight I never can divine When I shall couple with my Valentine."

Herrick's well-known poem expresses a popular belief about the origin of Valentine's Day. However, the original Christian festival is far removed from this interpretation.

St. Valentine's Day originated as the commemoration of the martyrdom of Saint Valentine in 270 A.D. However, by the 14th century, the religious significance was largely forgotten and popular myths dominated the day.

The Christian Saint became the patron Saint of lovers, and February 14 became significant as the day on which birds chose their mates. More recently, the customs of presenting gifts and cards have evolved. A medieval holy day has now become a popular holiday.

Slides Shown On New York's World Fair

The Juniors and Seniors of Andover Central School had the privilege of seeing slides on the World's Fair Friday afternoon.

A telephone representative informed the classes that the Fair begins April 22nd of this year, closes for a brief time and then reopens throughout 1965. The Fair includes exhibitions of man's achievements in industry, science, and arts, featuring Federal, State, Industrial and National exhibits. Some of the buildings include: General Motors, Ford Corporation, Science, Educational and State.

Several nations are being represented with buildings of their own. One country's buildings in particular which is well worth seeing is Italy. In this building, one almost imagines that he is in the Vatican in Rome. Michael Angelo's famous paintings were sent to the United States from Rome to be seen at the Fair.

Moreover, at the Fair a person will also find sixty-three beautiful restaurants available. The children, as well as the adults, can be entertained by the various amusement parks at the fair ground. In the evening fireworks will be displayed and viewed by many.

In conclusion the Juniors and Seniors were immensely impressed with the slides.

The Seniors of 1964 will see the Fair plus other places of interest in New York during April.

The Junior (Class of 1965) will also be fortunate in that the Fair will be open when they go on their Senior Trip in 1965.
