Week is being observed this Month. When you walk down the street, do you realize what unthe street, do you realize what untured it is present in ordinary things. The sparkling snow-drifts in the early morning, a robin strutting along the sidewalk; or the majestic grandeur of cloud patterns and the waves of glory when the sun sets, are all beautiful. The person with the gift of sight should be very thankful that the world is open to him.

While examining the beauty of the printed words, let's explore some "Eye Odditics" of nature. Since the elephant is one of our largest land animals, it would be logical to guess that it had the largest eyes of all land animals; but the horse prances away with that record. Then along swims the whale, proudly holding the record of having the largest eyes of all animals. Upon closer observation it is also found that the whale's right eye is larger than his left one. Yet, the largest eye on land does not belong to an animal; but to the long-legged bird called the ostrich. Br'er Rabbit has eyes which enable him to see behind as well as in front withanimal; but to the long-legged bird called the ostrich. Br'er Rabbit has eyes which enable him to see behind as well as in front without moving his head. Overlapping fields of vision make this possible and is a safety asset to Br'er. Most night roaming animals have eyes that shine in the dark, but roaming active mostly during the animals active mostly during the day, like rabbits, possess non-lum-inous eyes. The publis of a wolf's eyes are oblique slits; and sailfish have eyes which have triangular pupils.

The first noticeable thing of something being different about the solitary frog is its eyes. They are a bright yellow and have two black lines crossing each numil at one-tenth to one-hundredth of the amount of light needed by man to see. Ancient Buddhists selected the fish as a symbol of furtantial mess against temptation because the eyes of the fish are never closed. The reason is because fish have no eyelids.

Although humans must take a back seat to the ostrich in the size of the eye, the human with the gift of sight is very fortunate. Let's all provide proper illumina-tion when we are reading or watching television. Proper light vision for our entire lives. This certainly is not too much to ask for the gift of vision.
