Red Cross To Offer First Aid Instructors Course

The Red Cross has been teaching first aid to Americans continuously since January 1, 1910, with over 21,000,000 certificates issued to adults since then. Until 1924, only Doctors of Medicine could teach first aid, and not until 1937 were instructors classes trained by members of the Red Cross Safety Service staff rather than by doctors. These staff members are thoroughly trained experts in their line. The opportunity is now being given to properly certified residents of our County to take the up-to-date instructors course locally.

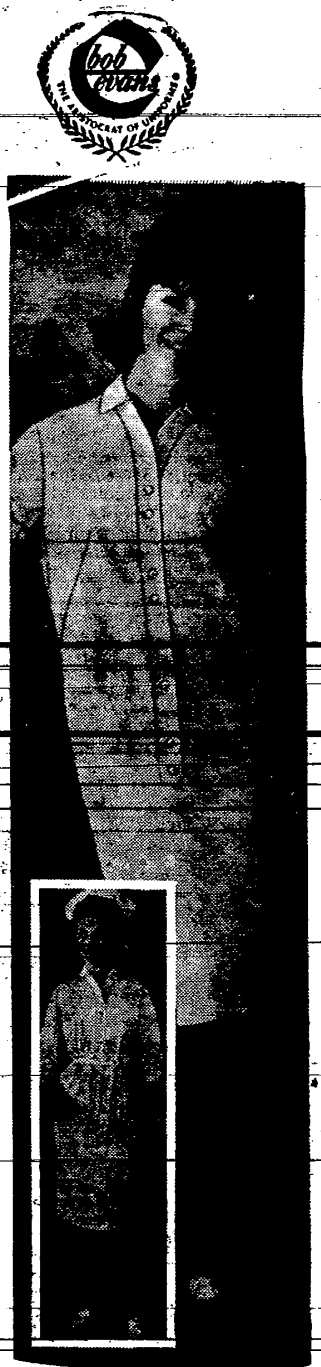

The Allegany County Chapter of American Red Cross will offer a First Aid Instructors Course in the Fall of 1964, if enough area residents are interested. The course, to be given by Harold Mason, First Aid and Water Safety Representative of the American National Red Cross, will consist of five consecutive day or evening sessions of three-hour each. The location would be determined later.

A current advanced first aid certificate is necessary to be eligible for the course. Any qualified persons interested in taking this course are asked to notify the Allegany County Chapter of American Red Cross, Community Building, Wellsville, N. Y., by May 1, 1964.

Style Wise SHIFT

Of course, here's THE SHIFT — it's made for the summer scene — it's certain for summer sales — it's the hot weather must. And, this slender slip style has very special body skimming darts placed from the side pockets to give a wonderfully cool gentle fit. Plus the appeal of the dipping cardigan neckline of the buttoning front that is finished with a little flip collar. With separate belt.
