News That's Print To Fit

Boy, what a week this last one has been !!! Work, Work, and more Work; friends sick and in the hospital; races to go to, pictures to take—and then finish; deadline on a 36 page book to get out (and met); the Mrs. with a tooth that had to be chiseled and on a liquid diet most of the week; and then—the weather !!! and then—the weather !!!

First it rained; then the grass rist it rained; then the grass grew like — (it usually does); then a day or so of HOT Weather and there rain — another day or so of Hot weather — and then a near Cyclone! and then to be climaxed with this morning!!!

30 years ago today they had a hard frost—and today history repeated itself.

This morning at 5:30, the thermometer on our back porch sat (or rather squatted) at 28 de-grees with a white frost over al-most everything and the beautiful flowers were limp like dish-rags!

At two A. M., when we got home from the News Office, we covered up our two French Lilac Bushes with blankets and may have saved them from freezing. We also followed some advice that had been passed along to us and sprayed all of our flowers with a garden hose before the sun got a garden hose before the sun got to them—as this is supposed to take the frost out of them without ruining them—but won't know the results probably for a day or so. This is the first time in at least four years that our purple French Lilac has even blossomed—and then to be treated like this at the heighth of its glory—oh well! Such is life—while still on the subject of wild life—it reminds us that we heard another hair-raising story in the life of "Rattlesnake Hunter Max" last week and didn't have room to mention it.

Seems that Max and Mrs. were out riding in the country and saw a flock of sheep behaving pecu-larly and stopped to investigate.

To an old rattlesnake hunter: this offered quita a challenge, so our friend grabbed & tick and started stalking his prey. On getting closer to the action, he could see that the animal was a fairly good sized Coon and after much careful maneuvering managed to good sized Coon and after much careful maneuvering managed to get close anough to it so that he was able to burl a stone at the critter and kill it. County Seeks Brucellosis Certification

Advance in herd health measures in Allegany County now indicate it could become a "Brucellosis Certified County" — an area cleared of brucellosis infection. Brucellosis, or undulant fever, in humans in New York State is at its lowest point since 1948 as a result of control programs. For every 248 cases in 1948 there were only 5 in 1962.
