SENATOR JACOB K. JAVITS

reports

FROM WASHINGTON

Congress now has a pretty good idea of what President Johnson means by the "Great Society". In the last three weeks he has delivered seven special messages detailing the Administration's aspirations for the American people in everything from health to disarmament.

Most of us agree with the President's aspirations, but realize that if the "Great Society" is to be more than a slogan, it will require more than ardent hopes; it will require policy decisions of great wisdom plus detailed implementation of great skill by the President and the Congress. The danger is that with both Houses of Congress heavily controlled by the President's Party, the Administration program will not be examined as critically as it should and vital improvements or safeguards will not be made. This is why, as ranking minority member of the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee, which will handle most of these programs, as they relate to health and education, I intend to examine each of them very closely and consult with New York experts to determine if their practical effects will match their promise.

Education is a case in point. In the main, I agree with the Administration program, drawn from both Democratic and Republican inspiration, which more than doubles Federal aid to education at all levels. Certainly massive efforts will be needed if we are to meet the needs of the 4 million additional elementary and secondary school students—including almost a half million in New York State alone—expected to swell our enrollments in the next five years. This will require construction of 400,000 new classrooms—24,000 of them in New York—severely taxing many school districts in the cores of our cities, large and small, and in rural areas.

Almost every New Yorker would agree also that we must improve the quality of our instruction, especially for the children of lower income families, if our students are to compete in this nuclear age and if our country is to have the best qualified and educated people to lead it.

The President's proposals outline solutions to these and many other problems in education, and comprise perhaps the most comprehensive and far-reaching program of this type ever sent to Congress. I believe that the chances of passage of the educational bills this year are the best we have ever had, but as I have in the past—notably in the war on poverty program and the Senate-passed Appalachia Bill last year—I will do all I can to assure that the programs make full use of state experience, initiative and administration. In this way state and local educational efforts will be strengthened, not hindered by Federal action.

Constant talk of the Administration's proposed new legislation shouldn't distract us from problems we have faced and failed to deal with realistically for many years. The Federal farm program, is an outstanding example of this, and I have again introduced legislation to create a Hoover-type commission to re-examine the effectiveness of our agricultural laws and programs, including price supports and production limitation.

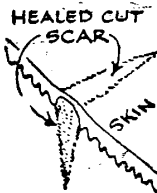

My bill, co-sponsored by Senator John Tower of Texas, would establish a 12-man, bipartisan group, with six members drawn from outside the government, to make a thorough survey of our farm programs, recommend improvements, and explore alternatives for reducing surpluses. With all the recurring charges and counter-charges concerning the farm program, I believe the American farmer, as well as the consumer, is entitled to a thorough unbiased evaluation of Federal farm pro-

MEDICAL SOCIETY OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK

AS EVERYONE KNOWS, A SCAR IS THE MARKER LEFT BY WOUNDED TISSUES WHEN THEY HEAL. HOWEVER, MILD INJURIES MAY NOT LEAVE A SCAR. FOR EXAMPLE—A BLISTER CAN HEAL WITH GOOD, NEW SKIN AND LEAVE NO TRACE OF A SCAR.

BUT, WHEN INJURY GOES ALL THE WAY THROUGH THE SKIN, A SCAR WILL RESULT. GENERALLY, AS SCARS GET OLDER, THEY SHRINK AND BECOME LIGHTER IN COLOR THAN THE SURROUNDING SKIN.

SCARS FORM AS A RESULT OF HEALING INSIDE THE BODY AS WELL AS OUTSIDE. EXAMPLE—A HEALED STOMACH ULCER RESULTS IN A SCAR JUST AS DOES A DEEP ULCER IN THE SKIN.

THE SURGEON'S WORK ENTAILS A THOROUGH KNOWLEDGE OF THE NATURAL HISTORY OF SCARS.

Rep. Goodell Named To Education And Labor Committee

Rep. Charles E. Goodell has been named the senior Republican member of the General Subcommittee on Education of the House Education and Labor Committee.

The Subcommittee has begun hearings on the proposals of the Administration for Federal assistance to elementary and secondary schools.

Commenting on the proposals, Rep. Goodell said: "All Americans share the goal of having the best attainable education available to all our children. Republicans have stressed the importance of preserving State local, and private responsibility for achievement of this goal, but we have sponsored and strongly supported carefully drawn Federal education measures such as the National Defense Education Act, College Aid, the Manpower Development and Training Act, and improved Vocational Education Acts.

This year Federal education expenditures will total nearly $5 billion, or $1 for every $6.50 spent for all education, public and private, from kindergarten through the university. Next year, if these proposals are enacted, Federal expenditures will have soared to about $7 billion or $1 for every $5 spent for education in America. This massive Federal effort is scattered through scores of programs in over 40 Federal bureaus and agencies, and affects all levels of education.

These new Administration proposals involve some fundamental and extremely difficult issues of public policy, such as the degree of Federal involvement in private education and the nature and extent of Federal educational activities carried on outside our regular schools and school systems. They also raise the question of whether Federal programs may not become so numerous, overlapping dispersed as to weaken national efforts in critical fields. Democrats and Republicans on this committee share an equal obligation to give these proposals the most meticulous scrutiny. Federal intrusions in education are becoming so extensive and complicated that stifling Federal controls are virtually inevitable."

grams and their practical effects. A copy of President John F. Kennedy's Inaugural Address suitable for framing, has been ordered printed by the Congress. A limited supply is on hand at my Washington office, and I would be pleased to send a copy to anyone requesting it.
