Editorial

by Jean DeRemer

It seems that in this age of non-conformists, some people are trying to be individuals. Yet, most are following the crowd. They show this mob-behavior in their acceptance of responsibilities.

Many people today are very content to let somebody else do anything that requires work. These conformists let everybody else do everything that needs to be done. Then they do all the things that are fun.

We need to take upon ourselves the responsibilities of doing things for ourselves. In this way, we can show people that we are "big enough" to be allowed to do other things.

FFA Members Contribute To Charity

In view of the recent Palm Sunday tornado disaster in Indiana, the local Future Farmers of America made a contribution of $50 to the Eastern Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities. Each FFA member contributed one dollar which was matched with funds from the FFA treasury.
