Can We Look Into The Future?

What does the future hold in store for the students of Andover Central School, Allegany County, New York State, the United States or the World? There are those who believe they know, but they cannot be sure of can they? Can we be reasonably sure of what our future holds?

I think, we can. I say we can be sure our world will live on in peace, prosperity, and integrity. But we can only be sure of this if we have the force behind this belief. The force, today's teenagers. Yes, we teenagers who are causing riots, dropping out of school and proving ourselves worthless at times are the ones who can force our nation toward wealth and prosperity. Why? Because we are also the teenagers who every year at this time send applications by the millions to colleges throughout the nation. We're the teenagers who win scholarships and acquire great achievements in many fields such as gymnastics, academics, art, music and many others. We're the ones who work our way through school and become members of the Armed Services and the Peace-Corps. We do all these things and many more so that we can better our nation and the world and yet some say we're incapable of handling what the future holds. We are capable and that is why we are just a little more sure of what the future holds for us. We know what we want and most of us are doing everything we can to see that we get it.

What do we want? Among many things, we want peace and understanding among all nations, health for all people in the world, equality among men and better jobs for all. We can be sure the future holds these things for us because we're willing to work toward them.

Where is Our School Spirit?

In the past few years at ACS, School Spirit has seemed to be a problem, especially in the field of sports. The students don't want to cheer for a losing team. The boys are playing their best, but they need your backing. However, some students feel that it is not their duty to cheer a team on. They say that this job belongs to the cheerleaders.

Well, cheerleaders are merely what the name implies—they are there to LEAD CHEERS. The actual cheering is up to you! Each of you is more important than any cheerleader—providing you make some effort. It is up to each one of you to support your team. Cooperate with your cheerleaders. They are there to help you and your team.

In discussing school spirit, we can't omit the students who don't want to cheer for a losing team. My only advice to these people is—STAY HOME! Certainly, after a few losses everyone feels discouraged—especially the team.

These boys have a responsibility to you. They know you are depending upon them. However, if they know that they are being backed by your support, they will do much better. In turn, when they start to win, your school will receive the honors!

How about starting the season right? To this date, we have had two soccer games played here, each with very poor attendance. Were you there? If not, how about making an effort? It will be appreciated. School Spirit is only achieved by your efforts. You are the school!
