"Investment In Learning"

When people hear the "Invest", they usually think of money. They think of investing money for a new home or into a savings account, but there is another way to invest and another thing to invest toward. The dictionary says you "add to or contribute to" when you invest. National Education week urged everyone to "Invest in Learning".

It is a widely known fact that a great deal of money is spent for a good education and many wonder the reason for this. Usually when you invest money toward something, you expect to receive something in return for your savings. That applies to education also. Compare getting an education with buying or building a house. You spend considerable money getting this house and you find that it was well worth it when at last you are living in your new home. You also invest considerable money in acquiring an education, but when college is behind you and you have a good job and have money for the things you want, you will realize investment in education was a wise one.

Sometimes when people invest, they find they cannot invest as much as others. If you find you cannot invest in a college education, there are more things to invest than money. Even if you cannot borrow the money, invest as much time as you can and as much effort in learning while you are still in high school. In this way you are receiving as much benefit as possible.

There are many things worthy of investment and learning is most certainly a good thing to invest in for you'll receive a very very wonderful reward in return.

Senior Interview

The Senior interview this week was with March 7, 1948 and she has one sister.

She has majored in business and home economics throughout high school. Her school activities have included FHA, four years; GAA, three years; Library Council, two years; and the Junior play in which she had a part. Outside school she is active in C.Y.A. Olean Business Institute is in her plans for the future.

Her philosophy is "treat people the same as you would like to be treated" and her pet peeve is conceited people. Some of her favorites include: Color, blue; food hot dogs, movie, "Gone With The Wind"; subject, Home Economics.

Now do you know who this senior is? In case you don't know, we'll tell you. Her name is Noreen Kaye Billings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Billings.

Noreen, we wish you the best of luck in the future.
