New York Holstein Nationally Honored

Brattleboro, Vermont — Recognition as a Gold Medal Sire has been awarded by Holstein-Friesian Association of America to a bull owned by Russell Price, Jr., of Jasper, N. Y. Only those Registered Holstein bulls having daughters that meet high standards in both milk production and body conformation are awarded Gold Medal honors. This recognition has been given under the revised rules which became effective January 1, 1968.

The bull, Bluegill Pontiac Supreme 1433675 (EX), permanently joins the Gold Medal Sire ranks after being designated as both "Production and Type Qualified" in a recently published issue of Registered Holstein Sire Performance Summaries. The Holstein Association, in cooperation with USDA, calculates and prints sire performance information three times each year. These facts are used by dairymen as a guide for selecting sires for use in their herds.

The temporary designation "Type Qualified" is re-evaluated each time a sire's performance is updated. Requirements demand a certain level of body conformation improvement in the daughters of the sire when compared to their dams. Other factors included pertain to Holstein breed average type scores for age and the number of daughters considered.

"Production Qualified" is also temporary in that the prescribed qualifications must be met each time the performance of the sire is figured. USDA calculates the must production performance of the sire's daughters, comparing them with their herdmates. All DHIA production records accepted by USDA from the daughters of the sire are included in the summarization.

Congressman 38th District Reports To You From Washington, D. C.

THE YEAR THAT WAS—This is a report of my first year as your Congressman. Dramatic events ranging from campus riots to moratorium marches marked the year, climaxed by a landing of man on the moon. It was one of the longest Sessions of Congress in history. Starting last January — except for a brief recess in August — we were in session right up until Dec. 23, thus preventing me from spending as much time as I had hoped back in the 38th District.

The year saw the start of legislation aimed at bringing necessary reform in welfare, the draft, income taxes, the electoral system, social security and pollution control. I introduced some 68 bills, many dealing with these issues. Your office in Washington responded by letter to more than 10,000 queries from you and handled hundreds of other special classes which required consultation with Federal agencies. I travelled close to 90,000 miles, mostly on week-end trips back home for meetings and speaking engagements. A tour of college campuses last May and a visit to Vietnam during the August recess (neither trip at taxpayers' expense) added to the mileage.

VIETNAM — A NATION'S AGONY

Public debate late last year reached a peak over Vietnam, certainly one of the most bitter and frustrating wars in our history. While in Vietnam last August, I talked with soldiers, with our military chiefs and with Saigon government leaders. It is my firm conviction that President Nixon is on the right road to achieve the peace we all want. I was among the first in Congress to support the President in his efforts to end the war. In my opinion, his policy will bring us lasting peace and not just a temporary truce.

The goal of everyone is peace, but achievement through instant with it is not the way. Such a course could mean that today's children would be fated to fight tomorrow in future Vietnams. The President is taking us in a proper and sensible direction. Under his Vietnamization plan, South Vietnamese troops are doing more and more of the fighting, and by mid-April there is scheduled to be 110,000 fewer U.S. soldiers in Vietnam. The move is away from military entanglements, reversing at last the tragic trend of the past

Amount Of Income Determines If Tax Return Is Required

The amount of your income is a key factor in determining whether you have to file a Federal income tax return. John E. Foley, District Director, Internal Revenue, Buffalo, has stated.

Anyone under 65 years of age with a gross income of $600 or more for the year has to file a return. This requirement applies to minors, students, single and married alike.

No return is required from anyone 65 or older on the last day of the tax year unless the gross income was $1,200 or more. However, when the income is under these limits a return should be filed to get a refund or any income tax withheld from salaries of wages.

Businessmen, farmers, and other self-employed persons must file a return if their net earnings from self-employment were $400 or more.

NUTRITIONAL QUACKERY

The other day an acquaintance said to me: "So what's the harm in a little quackery? We've had medicine men in this country since the white man came to America."

I know what the man means. In fact, if one recalls the amusing stories of O'Henry, the idea of the traveling huckster putting one over on the local folks, or vice versa, evokes thoughts of the good old days when America was less troubled than now.

But nutritional quackery, which is rampant today as ever, if not more so, presents real dangers which few people may realize.

There are at least five ways the consumer can be directly affected by nutritional quackery:

1. It can destroy confidence in sound advice. Think of the diets that are promoted that don't work, that people can't stay on. We hear of diets to do away with "monthly tensions." Then, there is a so-called "macrobiotic diet." The latter contains nothing but brown rice. It is claimed it offers spiritual enlightenment and that it will cure all illnesses past and present. Generally, such a diet is most often harmless, except for its destruction of confidence, because people will not tolerate it for a very long period of time. Those who do remain on it, die. Thus, at minimum, such diet advice may cause people to suspect even legitimate advice on nutrition.

2. Nutritional quackery can become an economic burden. Everyday, it seems, more people are tricked into spending extra money for special foods costing more money. The economic burden is even greater when they buy supplements or drugs, many of which don't even offer calories or any form of nourishment.

3. It can lead to dietary imbalance, frank malnutrition, and at times, to death. This can occur when following the claims of self-styled nutritionists that certain combinations of foods are harmful, such as carbohydrates with proteins and fats. Sometimes well educated people believe this nonsense. Many doctors, even, have been misled. And, in my opinion, the unproven theories about the dangers of cholesterol-containing foods are in this category.

4. Quackery can delay proper therapy of disease. It is truly tragic when a person is led to believe a cure is possible through some trick scheme or nutritional approach. A cancer, for example, that is too far gone when a doctor is finally consulted can be no longer surgically curable and death results needlessly.

5. Quackery can cause a host of physiological symptoms, at times leading to death. Here I have mostly in mind the current rage for diet pills. Death occurred, for example, in a 19 year old boy on a weight reducing regimen of thyroid, digitalis, amphetamines and diuretics. The side effects of these drugs can be monstrous and can occur from very small doses, indeed.

What this country needs is more education on the dangers of nutritional quackery, strong programs by medical societies and Better Business Bureaus warning consumers, and action by the Food and Drug Administration in removing harmful products from the market place.
