Rep. James F. Hastings Reports

Rep. James F. Hastings (38th Dist-NY) has joined in support of proposed legislation aimed at revitalizing economically depressed rural regions.

The legislation, which he co-sponsored with Rep. Philip E. Ruppe (R-Mich.), would provide for a 20 per cent tax credit for business and industry locating in rural areas officially designated as depressed. Rep. Hastings' district is included in the Appalachia Region and would thus qualify for tax credits under the proposed legislation, titled The Regional Development Incentive Act of 1970.

The Allegany, N. Y. lawmaker said such a program not only is needed to restore economic balance between urban and rural areas but is especially timely in his district with construction of the Southern Tier Expressway providing added transportation facilities for new plants.

"The purpose of this bill," Hastings said, "is to attract business and industry to rural areas which have been left out of the mainstream of national economic growth."

"Our rural areas have suffered from a depletion in economic and human resources. Our young people move away to seek job opportunities in large cities and for those that are left the employment opportunities are few and limited."

"Under these conditions, the tax base for the rural community grows smaller and the financial burden for providing even the basic services becomes greater."

Rep. Hastings noted that the legislation will not provide tax credits for those industries which simply relocate their facilities from one region to another.

"This tax incentive program along with the Southern Tier Expressway can serve as a double stimulus in aiding the lagging rural areas in our district by providing them with opportunities to share in the national prosperity," he said.

FROSTBITE FISHING

Hit the center of New York State with a dart, and you'll find Oneida Lake to be the bullseye. Try these famous waters for walleyes and perch this time of year, and you will find the frostbite fishing scores another bullseye.

With ice fishing opportunities beckoning all across the State — from perch fishing on Lake Erie, to catching smelt on Lake Champlain — I decided to try the center.

Ted Kochanek and I unloaded our Ski-Doo at Constantia, on the North shore of Oneida, and headed toward the clusters of fishermen on the ice. A layer of slush topped with snow made for tough going, and the snowmobile saved us a lot of time and effort. Several of the anglers had perch on the ice, and they were catching an occasional walleye, which are called "pike".

We started jiggging with a popular lure on Oneida, a streamlined spoon with the unlikely name of Swedish Pimple. We began to pick up a few perch, but Ted found time to put out some tip-ups with minnows for bait. The action came and went in waves as schools of fish circled under us — the dull times were taken up with drinking coffee, and bantering with nearby fishermen.

Along toward mid-afternoon Ted decided to move. We loaded our fish and gear; buzzed into the car, and headed eastward toward Cleveland. With only a couple of hours of daylight remaining we raced out to deeper water, and we could see the walleye catches were running heavier.

"Get ready to catch some here," Ted warned. "Just before dark is when the oldtimers always take a lot of pride."

I was ready when the first tap came, and I quickly hauled a walleye to the surface. Most of the action, however, came from perch. About then one of Ted's tip-up flags began to jump. He ran over and began hauling in the 30 feet of line — his smile meant he had a good one. Out on the ice came the biggest walleye we'd seen all day. It weighed five pounds.

As the sun disappeared in a snow shower, we picked up our fish. We'd had a good day outdoors, and spring seemed a little closer. There's a lot of satisfaction in this frostbite fishing.

Ceremony Opens Census '70 District Office

At a ceremony recently, State Senator, Jess J. Present cut a length of computer tape, officially opening the district office in Jamestown from which the 1970 Census of Population and Housing will be directed in this area. Russell A. Fuscus, Manager of the district office, explained that computer tape is symbolic of the Census Bureau's modern electronic equipment that will process the data collected in the census.

This district office will be headquarters for census operations in Chautauqua, Cattaraugus, Allegany, Steuben, Schuyler, Wyoming, and Genesee counties.

With the official opening the active phase of the census gets under way in this census district. About 550 crew leaders and census takers will be selected and trained. Detailed arrangements will be made to enumerate people in institutions, jails, hospitals, colleges, and places other than in homes, all in preparation for April 1 when the actual enumeration begins.

Beginning four days before April 1, mail carriers will leave census questionnaires at each residential mailbox. Each family will be asked to fill out its questionnaire and hold it for the census taker. The enumeration of the district is expected to be completed in about five weeks after the census takers begin making calls on April 1.

There are 189 other census districts throughout the country where this method of enumeration will be used. The Census Bureau estimates that about 40 percent of the U. S. population live in these districts.

There are 212 other census districts in which the remaining 60 percent of the population live. These districts, for the most part, include the large cities and their suburbs. Households in these districts will also receive census questionnaires in the mail to fill out, but they will be asked to mail them back to the census office in a postage-free envelope that will accompany the questionnaire. No census taker will call at these households from which completely filled out questionnaires are returned.

The Census Bureau says that having the questionnaire in the home for several days gives the family time to assemble information about each member of the household, thus speeding up the census and providing accurate statistics.
