News That's Print To Fit

Hello there all you winter-weary denizens — we have good news for you! Yep — Spring is officially Here! — That is, according to the calendar. And, of course we have other sure indications such as: 1. Our Croci are up in front of our house (on the South Side, that is). 2. We have heard of other reports of Robins being around — but this morning we saw, and counted, 5 big ones in our own backyard. 3. We saw one of the ACS boys bussing his girl friend on the Street this noon hour, and being of the jealous type, had to curb the tendency to stop and see if we could collect one too. (And, for a slight consideration like washing our car every week for a year or so, we might even forget the identification of said couple. Joking of course!)

However — don't think that winter is giving up just because of this! We had week-end guests from Manchester, Conn., this past week-end and they left for home Sunday afternoon during that snowstorm. And, in talking to them the other night, they said it took them around 13 hours to make the normal 8 hour trip. They reported that the Thruway was strewn with more accidents than they had ever seen at one time — and that the driving was really treacherous.

Then too, on our way back from P-serve meeting on Monday night as soon as we hit Jasper we ran into a snowstorm and the roads were bad all the way into Andover.

So-o-o, for all you Florida Snow Birds — just because we haven't reported the weather temperatures for the past two weeks — it isn't because we aren't still having winter, it's just because we haven't had room to report it!!!

Last week we had more pictures than we had room for and, so this week we have completed catching up on those — only to be faced with the same dilemma again this week.

However, we have tried to print the pictures according to the dates of their occurrence, and, at the risk of being fired as Secretary of the Rod & Gun Club, will have to hold these pictures and story of the Trout Stocking Program until next week.

Of course, for a slight fee, we might be persuaded to divulge the location of where these 6 - 8 inch trout amounting to around 1,400 in round numbers are.

Mrs. Floyd Cartwright
