Markmore, Tablegreen 65 Top Mosaic Virus Resistant Cucumbers

Home gardeners who have suffered heavy loss of cucumbers because of the cucumber mosaic virus should plant varieties that have built-in disease resistance.

Markmore and Tablegreen 65 both developed at Cornell University some years ago, are the top two cucumbers for slicing that carry high resistance to this devastating plant ailment.

Widespread in most areas of New York and in neighboring states, the mosaic virus has become a real problem, posing a serious menace to cucumbers and some other vine crops such as muskmelons and squash.

Recommending the Cornell varieties to avert the virus attack, Prof. Philip A. Minges, vegetable crops specialist at the N. Y. State College of Agriculture, stresses that the home gardener should not take a chance when there are perfectly good resistant varieties to plant.

When infected, the leaves turn yellow and often the plant dies. Fruit from surviving plants shows mottling and usually is bitter. Infection usually takes place when the plant is about six weeks old.

Professor Minges also cites Gemini as another good variety for home gardens. Also tolerant to

Late May Events Focus On Flower Festivals, Art Shows, Canoe Races

Judging by the calendar of events, late May is the time for flower festivals, art shows and canoe races, reports the New York State Department of Commerce. The calendar lists scheduled events of interest to tourists and vacationers in New York.

Heading the list of festivals will be the Lilac Festival in Rochester, usually the third week in May. The week-long Peony Festival at the William Gratiot Estate in Pavilion will begin May 24. Tulips will receive the salute of visitors to Clymer in Chautauqua County May 23 - 24.

Attention will turn to artists, beginning with the outdoor exhibit of the Arts Festival '70 presentation in Schenectady's Veterans' Park, May 18 - 24. The Student Honors Exhibit will open at Syracuse University's Lowe Art Center May 18 and continue through September 1.

Tourists in New York City will have the opportunity to examine African sculpture at the Brooklyn Museum, May 19 - June 21. "Masterpieces from the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston," will be on view at the Metropolitan Museum, May 29 - July 26.

Three canoe races and a rowing regatta will fill the Memorial Day Week-end. On May 30, the General Clinton Canoe Regatta, the National Championship Flat Water 70-mile Endurance Race, will be run on the Susquehanna, Coopers-town to Bainbridge. The 104th Memorial Day Rowing Regatta will be a New York City event at Pelham Bay Park, Bronx. Canoeists will race on West Canada Creek at Newport on May 31. On the same day, the Lake Placid Jaycee Canoe Races will be held on the Ausable River.

Harness races at the Historic Track in Goshen are scheduled May 16, 23, and 31. The spring meeting at Belmont Park will get underway May 25.

Fishermen can enter the National Lake Trout Derby, May 29 - 31 powdery mildew another common disease of cucumbers. Gemini yields heavily early in the season.

"There are lots of other cucumber varieties listed as mosaic resistant, but none of them are as resistant as Markmore, Tablegreen 65 and Gemini," he points out.

Markmore beats fruit some what earlier than Tablegreen 65 producing straight uniform cucumbers, slightly tapered to the ends and of good dark color at normal temperatures. Tablegreen 65 which produces over a long season has dark green fruit even in hot weather. Both have resistance to scab a fungal disease.

Cucumbers and squash have a short growing season, requiring about 50 to 70 days to mature. Since seed will not germinate well in cold soil and the plant is sensitive to frosts, planting should be delayed until all danger of frost is over.

Start the early variety Gemini indoors in late April or early May. When the plant has developed one true leaf after two or three weeks set it out in the garden during mid-May. Markmore or Tablegreen 65 can be seeded directly outside in late May or early June. This sequence will give a steady supply of fresh cucumbers throughout the season.

SOUTH TO SPRING

This year we opened the trout season in Florida for an early taste of spring. The quarry was saltwater speckled trout or weakfish that inhabit shallow water beaches and weedbeds. Our search took us to Sanibel Island on the Gulf Coast, a locale rich in pirate lore and a treasure trove for fishermen and shell collectors.

It was a family vacation and our time was limited, so we flew to Tampa via Easterns Air Lines utilizing their new Fly In-Camp Out Program. Camp America had a pick-up truck camper waiting for us, and we were soon headed south for the 140-mile drive to Sanibel.

Our reservations there were at the Periwinkle Trailer Park, and their 200 campsites were chock full for the spring vacation period. Trout is one of the most common sport fishes in the area, but there is always the chance of latching on to a snook — a solitary, moody critter that likes to tear up tackle like a Chautauqua Lake muskie. Jack crevalle and ladyfish are also taken regularly to complete the mixed bag.

Most anglers like to fish on a rising tide, and the snook fanatics find night fishing most productive. To fish the shallow water around Sanibel, you take your spinning tackle and make like a bass fisherman. Jigs and plugs both take fish, and you cast them along shorelines, piers, and weed beds. Snook seem to favor plugs over jigs, and a live pin fish will also put them on a feeding spree. My tactics were to drive the camper to a beach on the bay side and find a shady place to park. While the family looked for shells, swam, loafed in the sun, I waded the shoreline casting. My catch set no records, but we had plenty of trout to eat. They fight a dogged battle giving freshwater tackle and 12-pound line all the action it can handle.

Jack crevalles are even harder to subdue, and you learn to handle them with respect. But the excitement comes with a little ladyfish takes your lure. It spends more time in the air than in the water — you've never seen a finer acrobat until you see one of these sucker-shaped fish dance across the surface. After the fun, both crevalles and ladyfish are returned as they are not good to eat.

I wasn't having any success with the snook, but one morning I saw a tail fin cutting the surface as a feeding fish tore up a school of minnows. Baitfish jumped into the air to escape the slashing attacks. This was an ideal situation. I tossed a green Mirrorlure into the melee, and had an immediate hit.

A snook erupted from the water, stripped 50 feet of line from the reel and came out again. Just then my hooks lost their hold on his bony mouth and my line and spirits sagged.

But looking back it was a perfect trip. We missed some of winter's last gasps, opened the trout season on time and the biggest fish got away!
