Miss Barbara Ann Meehan became the bride of Kevin Michael O'Brien at 11 A. M., Saturday, August 1, 1970 at St. Mary's Church in Rexville. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Meehan of Rexville, R. F.D., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard O'Brien of the Greenwood-Canisteo Road. The Rev. Otto J. Vogt performed the double ring ceremony and celebrated the nuptial mass. Don and Larry Meehan, brothers of the bride, were altar boys. Summer flowers in gold vases and gold candleabra decorated the main and side altars. Organist playing the wedding music was Mrs. Douglas York of West Greenwood.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, wore a floor length gown of imported organza and Chantilly lace. It was embellished with lace appliques reembroidered with sequins and pearls. It was styled with an Empire lace bodice fashioned with a high neckline and bishop sleeves. The organza skirt had appliques and she had a Watteau Chapel train. Her elbow length bridal veil was caught to a headpiece of lace petals and a Dior bow topped with a princess crown of pearls and crystals. She carried a prayer book covered with a cascade of yellow roses white carnations, stephanotis and yellow and white daisies.

Miss Diane Smith of Danville, R.D., was maid-of-honor in an A-line yellow brocade gown with chiffon sleeves. It was complemented with a matching Dior bow headpiece, with streamers accented with yellow rosebuds. The bridesmaids were the Misses Marlene Meehan, Theresa Meehan, sisters of the bride and Laurie O'Brien of Greenwood, sister of the bridegroom. They were attired in identical apple green ensembles. Maria and Elizabeth Decker of Wellsville, nieces of the bridegroom, wore flower girls in similar yellow gowns and headpieces. The bridal attendants all carried colonial arrangements of yellow roses, white carnations, daisies and baby's breath.

Kerry O'Brien of Greenwood, was best man for his brother. Ushers were William Meehan of Rexville, brother of the bride and Stephen Lewis and Jeffrey Lewis of Rexville, cousins of the bridegroom. Martin Decker of Wellsville, nephew of the bridegroom, was ringbearer.

A reception for about 250 guests was held at St. Joachim's Parish Center in Canisteo. Hostesses were Misses Joan Spencer of Greenwood and Mary Ellen Hanbach of Rexville. Miss Jolene Cheesman of Greenwood was in charge of the guest book.

The bride wore a purple dress with white accessories and a corsage of yellow roses for a wedding trip to the Pocono Mountain, Pa. They will make their home at Stephens Street, Canisteo.

They are both 1968 graduates of Greenwood Central School. The bride is a 1970 graduate of BOCES licensed Practical Nursing Course and is employed at Bethesda Community Hospital. Mr. O'Brien is employed at Wilkins Service Station Inc., Hornell.

Bids To Be Opened On Southern Tier Expressway

Governor Rockefeller announced today that the State Department of Transportation will open bids on September 24 for construction of three sections of the Southern Tier Expressway in Allegany, Cattaraugus and Steuben Counties at an estimated total cost of more than $46 million.

The Transportation Bond Issue approved by New York voters in 1967 will provide funds to pay the State's share of the proposed contracts, the Governor said.

Two of the projects involve building graded embankment bridges and access roads for the expressway, and will be followed later by projects to pave the four-lane divided expressway sections. The embankments will extend for 7.7 miles in the Towns of Almond and West Almond, Allegany County, and cost an estimated $11,900,000, and for 5.5 miles in the Towns of Olean and Hinsdale, Cattaraugus County, estimated at $18,200,000.

In Steuben County, an estimated $18,000,000 will construct the complete expressway for 5.3 miles in the Towns of Bath and Avoca, and will join two sections now being built. Related work will include construction of interchanges with Route 53 and the future Genesee Expressway, and a safety parking and rest area with comfort station

FISHERMEN HAVE EXCUSES

As fishing waters warm with summer's sunshine, your catch is likely to fall off. I don't know the reason for this — in theory a cold-blooded critter like a fish should burn up more calories in warm water and thereby require more food. But it's common knowledge that fishing is not the best during hot weather.

Fishermen have to be alibi artists to begin with, and they have come up with some great excuses when the fish don't hit. Several of these came to mind the other day as I spent a futile afternoon casting on St. Lawrence County's Black Lake.

The old excuses are the best, and one of the favorites around Chautauqua County, Chautauqua Lake, is that they are "shedding their teeth." Anybody knows you can't catch a muskie, or a pike or walleye for that matter, if he has lost his choppers.

A minor flaw with this excuse is that fish do not lose their teeth. Never-the-less it works, and it brands you as an expert to determine the exact time teeth shedding begins.

If you stay out fishing all day you are almost certain to get a breeze from the East, and this opens up a whole series of "wrong wind" excuses. The best known through the Finger Lakes country is "wind from the East, fish bite the least." If you're skunked, it's best to forget "wind from the West, fish bite best."

But keep your weather eye on the wind — an act of God is a great alibi.

The scientific angler will watch the barometer, and our entire technological society seems to back up this excuse. "The glass was falling today, what'd you expect," he will say. This gets him off the hook, but don't ask him how many times he came in fishless when the barometer was rising.

And then there is the old "light of the moon" excuse. This theory holds that fishing is best during the dark of the moon, apparently figuring that fish feed all night when it's moonlight. And about the time fishermen are starting out, fish are seeking cool spots to sleep all day.

No one has asked a fish if he likes to feed all night and rest all day. As far as I'm concerned, he might have something else on his mind when it's moonlight and is too tired to bite.

The truth of the matter is that fish do not always bite when it is convenient for us to go fishing. But a fisherman with his salt avoids the truth like the plague — and thinking up those fancy excuses is half the fun.

near Route 53.

Governor Rockefeller said today three proposed contracts being offered at the same time are evidence of the accelerated pace of construction of the Southern Tier Expressway, which when complete in the mid-1970's will, together with the connecting Route 17 Expressway form a continuous 378 miles of toll-free divided highway across the Empire State's growing Southern Tier.

NOURISHING THIRST QUENCHERS

What's a doctor doing with a Pink Buttermilk Smoothie? Well, I'm sitting here with it next to my typewriter because it's hot today. And I wanted something to quench my thirst.

There is always water — though there are many localities where its taste is something less than wonderful. And there are other cooling drinks. But I was a bit hungry, too. And a Pink Buttermilk Smoothie has a zingy taste that just fits the bill.

Here's The Recipe

I learned the recipe a couple of years ago. Here's how you make it: Take two cups of cold buttermilk, two cups of chilled tomato-vegetable juice, 1 teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce, 1/2 teaspoon of salt, and a dash of hot pepper sauce.

Mix everything together. Pour into tall glasses. Garnish with a cucumber disk on the edge of each glass, or pop in a celery stick as a stirrer. Makes six servings, as a cooler, appetizer, or with a salad or sandwich luncheon. That, to me, is a thirst quencher!

It may seem strange, a doctor popping out with a recipe like that. But this "cooling drink" business is something I've looked into. So to continue prescribing:

There are flavored drinks made with regular milk, too. These are concocted using your favorite fruit. Use one-third cup of canned crushed pineapple, including the syrup. Pour it into your blender with a cup of cold milk, beating it until it's smooth and frothy. Canned or frozen peaches, sweetened fresh or frozen strawberries, raspberries, or cherries work well, too.

And for coffee lovers, there is mocha milk. Mix 1 cup of cold milk with 1 teaspoon of sugar, 4 teaspoons of cocoa mix, and 1 teaspoon instant coffee. It makes one serving. There also are milk floats in which you put a scoop of ice cream into almost anything liquid, even soft drinks.

And The Favorites

There are the stand-bys, iced tea and iced coffee, chilled juices with lots of ice. And there are, of course, lemon and orange ades.

And finally, there are several items, not strictly beverages, but I consider them as such if I want to cool off and have a bite to eat at the same time. One of them is vichyssoise, the cool French potato concoction. Then there's jellied consommé with buttered crackers. A version of this that I also like is jellied or liquid madrilene. Your cookbook will cover that.

So, there are a world of things we can do to quench thirst if we think about it. Why wait for a party. Make yourself a special thirst quencher now — just for yourself!
