

Hunters — Let's Brush Up On Our Hunting Etiquette! An Editorial

Hunters, with hunting season just around the corner, now would be a good time to brush up on — our hunting etiquette and remind others of a few simple rules for better Landowner-Sportsman relations.

A magician may be able to pull a rabbit out of a hat — but it takes more than magic to produce a place to hunt. — YOU can help to keep free hunting on private lands — and it won't cost you anything but CARE and COURTESY.

FIRST — ask PERMISSION. "A man's home — or his land — is his castle." It would be best to do this well before hunting season where you intend to hunt, and, then check in each time you hunt.

Then — be sure to observe any restrictions or suggestions that the landowner may have and any others that are obvious. Remember, YOU are a guest on HIS land!

BE COURTEOUS! The landowner is an average person as a rule — and he likes average people, so, when you meet him, talk with him on a friendly, neighborly basis.

DRIVING and PARKING. Farm roads and lanes are lines of the land. Don't drive on them without permission. You may damage these roads, especially in the wet seasons or spring and fall. And, park your car out of the way of farm or woods operations — and certainly not in the yard or fields unless you have permission.

FAMILY SAFETY. The landowner is always concerned with safety for his family, livestock and buildings. Keep well beyond his buildings and family area. (Law requires at least 500 feet). Never shoot in the direction of buildings or people!

GATES and FENCES. Leave gates as you find them. A landowner's time is valuable and he doesn't want to spend it rounding up strayed livestock. And, needless to say, fences are costly to the landowner so, cross them carefully, or better yet, use the gate, stile, or go around if possible. Mistreatment by hunters is one of the most important causes of posting.

PLANT, CROPS and PRODUCE. Crops are the landowner's livelihood! It's best not to hunt through standing crops and remember — whatever is on the landowner's land — belongs to him. Do not take anything without permission — even if it looks as though it isn't being used.

TARGET SHOOTING and SIGNS. Don't do any target shooting unless you have permission — and then — only where it is safe. And, damaging Posted Signs is the surest way of keeping them up. If the land is posted the landowner usually has a very good reason. Your conduct as a sportsman and gentleman can be the surest way of getting the signs down.

FIRE and CAMPING. Farmers and woodland owners must always be concerned with fire so, be sure your cigarettes, cigars, matches and pipe heels are "dead out". Never set up camp on any private property without first securing permission. Then abide by the owner's requests, watch your camp fires if you have permission to build one — and be sure and leave your camp site neat and clean when you leave!

GAME LAWS and GAME. Laws are for the protection of landowners and sportsmen and for the management of game populations. OBEY THEM — it's the only way you can be sure of maintaining free hunting on private lands. And, make sure you can recognize the legal game that you are hunting — after all — there is a big difference between a deer and a cow!

MAKE SURE BEFORE YOU SHOOT!
HELPING and THANKING. If you or your group hunt quite often on landowner friend's property, offer to help him any way within your capabilities. An offer to help can assure you a place to hunt for years to come. And, last but not least — A few words of thanks to the landowner at the end of a hunt will make you welcome next time. And, a small thoughtful gift the next time, is bound to be appreciated — and can assure you of a place to hunt in the future.

Governor Rockefeller recently announced the state's Urban Development Corp. has purchased the former Ten Eyck Hotel in Albany for $1.4 million. He said a four-block area that includes the hotel will be redeveloped to include a new hotel and parking for 1,300 cars.

The above sounds like a routine announcement, except perhaps for those old enough to remember the Ten Eyck in its heyday.

But its implications should scare the daylight out of a lot of state legislators.

One of the reasons a few assemblymen and senators like it the way it used to be is that no one from back home is watching them.

For that matter no one from back home is watching because, being sensible citizens, they know better than to come to the state capitol where parking is non-existent and staying in a nearby hotel means staying in a fleabag dump.

The average person who wants to come to Albany to see what goes on has to lose a day's pay to do it.

But it might be worth it if there was a place to park and a decent hotel.

And the parking is not just to save walking, either. It would allow the unwary visitor to get out of the capitol area and thus escape the sky-high meal prices.

Archaeological Survey Locates More Evidence

An archaeological survey team under the direction of Miss Vera Feher, Patchogue, L. I., an anthropology major at State University College of Arts and Science at Geneseo, has located more evidence of early habitation in the Genesee Valley south of Geneseo.

Charcoal samples from a fire pit 18" by 31" below surface have radiocarbon dated at 4180 ± 110 B. P. (2230 B. C.) by Isotopes Laboratories, Westwood, N. J. This date is one, in a series, resulting from continuing archaeological research conducted by Dr. Wendell D. Rhodes, chairman, Department of Anthropology, on the prehistory of the Genesee Valley.

Previous radiocarbon dates range from 1720 B. C. — 720 B. C. (Work will continue this fall and next spring).

The resources of the Archaeological Survey Center at Geneseo are available to area residents. Those wishing to utilize the facilities of the center should call Dr. Rhodes, Archaeological Survey Center — 245-5177, from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m.

Dr. Rhodes and students have been working the MacCauley site, at which Miss Feher's find was unearthed, since early summer, 1969.
