Editorial

The editorial which appears this week was written by Jeanne Atwell, a former editor, well a former editor.

How long has it been since you've read a book? I mean a really good book, one that improves the mind. Could it be that you seldom have time to curl up with one. Well, why not make the time. Surely, with twenty-four tooks in a day, one hour could be devoted to reading.

devoted to reading.

Why do I teel that there is an importance in reading? Where would we be today if it weren't for books. Many men and women have devoted portions of their lifetime to writing books. They have gives us the opportunity of reliving actual experiences, by reading their accounts of them. Reading is the main educator of the mind. A book is more than a few pages bound together. It represents a tool which makes a man, truly a man. No other animal has the ability to increase his knowledge by reading.

ability to increase his knowledge by reading.

Socrates was a man who took advantage of his reading skill. He expressed his feeling toward the pastime when he said: "Employ your time in improying yourself by other men's writings so you shall come easily by what others have labored hard for".

Rubella Vaccination Frogram as of May 1, 1972 60% BUT LESS THAN 70% 80% AND OVER

March of Dimes volunteers are working with public health officials and medical authorities in many areas to encourage rubella (German measles) inoculation programs. Children aged one to 12, and particularly the preschooler, are main targets for vaccination. Youngsters are the major source of rubella infection, a threat to every pregnant woman because of the severe, even fatal damage it can cause an unborn child. With large-scale immunization, rubella Infection can be sharply reduced. Birth Defects are Forever-Unless you help.
