Teacher's Recognition Day May 17th

Teachers' Recognition Day will be observed in Andover on Thursday, May 17th. It is a day set aside throughout New York State for parents and students to show some measure of gratitude to the teachers on their school system.

The tradition began years ago when families invited the country school teacher to their homes for dinner. As time progressed and the number of faculty increased the custom died out until the Governor proclaimed that all schools observe a "Teachers' Recognition Day" in May of each year.

The Andover PTA began this association with an annual tea at which one member of the board was honored as "Teacher of the Year."

Later, the tea became a dinner and as attendance increased a banquet with a theme. Last year's theme was an extreme success. This year the committee is planning an International Festival.

Mrs. Jesse Shaw, Chairman of the Committee, points out that although this is a banquet sponsored by the PTA, it is for all parents whether they are members of the organization or not. All may attend, however, it is necessary to have prior reservations. Reservations may be made by sending in slips to the school.

All parents will be contacted to donate a item of food. Please be cooperative with the members of the committee who contact you. Remember, it is each individual who makes the total a success.

It is also necessary to mention that this banquet is solely for teachers and parents. Students and small children cannot attend.
