Warning!

Shooting at power line insulators is a criminal act that can spell deep trouble for the offender and cause serious halts in electric service to entire communities at great expense.

This warning came from Niagara Mohawk Power Corp. officials as the fall shooting season again began in upstate New York.

"Making targets of power line insulators is one of the most senseless, irresponsible and potentially lethal actions that a shooter can take," said Leon B. Kiersz, general manager of the Cattaraugus area for Niagara Mohawk. "By doing so, a person places himself in grave danger of electrocution if the line should come down, and it causes immeasurable damage and cost through needless interruption of electric service. Power to hospitals, schools, homes, businesses and vital traffic signals can be knocked out by such vandalism," Kiersz noted.

He warned that firing at any type of utility equipment is against the law and that Niagara Mohawk is working closely with police and other enforcement authorities to apprehend offenders. The New York State Penal Law in cludes a specific section making it a crime to damage utility facilities and provides severe penalties for destruction of such property.

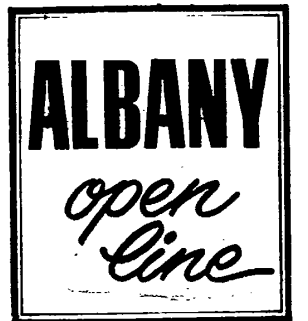

Kiersz said that sportsmen's clubs and the Department of Environmental Conservation are solidly behind the utility's campaign to end this vandalism. Hunter safety programs conducted by area sportsmen's groups spell out the consequences and dangers involving firing at insulators.

"We urge our customers and all responsible hunters and sportsmen to report known instances of insulator shooting and to help educate young shooters about its dangers".

Dec. 4 — How quickly was the dedication ceremony for the South Mall in Albany slapped together the other day?

So quickly that when the assembled dignitaries looked, they discovered that the name of Albany's Mayor, Erastus Corning, was left off the plaque.

Which is very interesting and probably a shortsight, because without Corning's cooperation, the Mall would still be the slum it was before it was transformed into 101 acres of marble and steel at a cost of the taxpayers of $1 billion.

In fact the governor has had over the years to support a number of bills he personally didn't like in order to get Corning's support.

And the plaque also misspelled the name of Democratic Senate Minority Leader Joseph Zaretzki. It came out Zaretzki.

When he saw it, Joe couldn't resist the temptation to get in one more lick.

"I'd ask that the plaque be changed to spell my name right," he said. "But the Mall has cost too much already."

Many were disappointed when it was learned the Mall was not to be named Rockefeller Mall, but only Empire State Mall.

Those same people also see the hurried dedication as one more sign that Rockefeller is in a hurry himself to leave his office in the Capitol across the street and begin running for the presidency in 1976.

Dec. 6 — Mario A. Procaccino, the state's new and commissioner of taxation and finance, is already cleaning house and promises even more to come.

The head of the state's tax collecting arm announced the other day the arrest of a tax examiner who is charged with forging signatures in order to get phony sales tax returns.

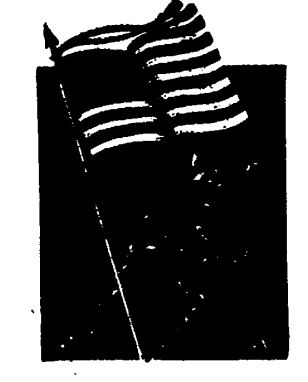

"This arrest was the result of a policy initiated immediately after I took office as commissioner to tighten the internal security of this department," said Procaccino adding that security forces have been beefed up to protect the department's reputation for honesty, integrity and fairness.

No sooner had Procaccino made the statement than New York City officials announced the arrest of 10 tax examiners in his office. They are charged with underestimating the annual sales taxes due the state by businessmen.

Procaccino has suspended all of those arrested without pay.

The current energy crisis is on the minds of some state legislators. Republican Assemblyman Neil W. Kelleher of Troy has prefiled a bill for the 1974 session of the Legislature calling for the suspension of the state sales tax on all fuel used for home heating during the emergency.

"It is becoming more and more apparent that the person heating his home this winter will be on the short end of the stick," said

Now that things are back to normal for the first time since election I would like to thank all of the people in District 5 who helped me. My family and friends spent a lot of time in doing all the things that we felt necessary. A special thanks goes to my daughter-in-law, Donna Ryan, who coordinated most of my personal efforts when she was very much involved at the same time with the Maple Leaf "Sweet Adelines" show.

At the present time the legislature's most important job is getting the 1974 budget prepared. I expect even at this late date to have several more long sessions before we will have majority approval. Two of the top issues would be reaching agreement with the County employees on their contract and keeping someone in a position of liaison between the County and industry that is interested in locating in our County. It is my opinion that we make every effort possible to entice good sound businesses to locate here. In the past year, this has been handled by the Economic Development Office under the leadership of Ken Roberts Jr. Much to my disappointment this has been done

Kelleher. "Not only will he face the possibility of running out of fuel, but he will be hit with severely increased prices."

Kelleher would use some of the predicted budget surplus for the coming fiscal year to replace the revenues lost by suspending the sales tax on fuel.

And Republican Assemblyman William M. Steinfeldt of Monroe County has prefiled a bill that would mandate building insulation standards throughout the state.

Steinfeldt, chairman of the Assembly Committee on Energy Conservation, said a lack of such requirements in the law leads to the use of cheap insulating material or none at all in many buildings, causing "an extensive loss of heat, wasting both the fuel itself and the money spent for the long-term heating needs of the building."

away with in the 1974 budget; surely we must have all the effort we can muster to maintain liaison between Allegany County and good prospective industries. In the past year, we established an industrial park agency to make it possible for existing industries to get financial help in expansion as well as using it as a tool to help new industries. With inflation eating away, we must increase our tax base.

In the last several weeks, the County school districts have petitioned the County legislature for part of the sales tax revenues. This issue will certainly come to a head this coming week (Dec. 5) when we will be holding a public hearing on the budget.

The Off Track Betting has made a big stir in the County, as you are well aware. This Monday, it came up on the floor for a vote and was passed 8 to 7 with yours truly casting a negative vote. I have mixed emotions on this subject. I reason that people who play the horses will gamble legally or illegally, that Allegany County would benefit from additional revenue, but when Allegany County operates betting parlors, then we are promoting gambling and making it easy for people to buy tickets on horse races. It seems to me that this is morally not right. Anyway, I imagine that this subject will get a real going over in Ways and Means Committee on Tuesday, Dec. 4, and later that same day in a committee of the whole meeting. John Hasper will offer a plan to share the off-track betting revenues with the school districts. How this will affect the public reaction will be watched very closely.

The legislature gave approval to the solid wastes advisory committee's resolution for establishing a contract with Donald Dillie of Wellsville for pickup of the clean and green containers in the Town of Willing, our pilot project. We expect to get started with this as soon as the containers arrive. We will notify people within a two-mile radius of this service and hope for good results.

I would like to make this column a monthly endeavor, whereby I can keep you informed of events in county government. Please do not hesitate to call me if you have any questions or interests which are special to you.
