Editorial

by Teresa Polmateer
The headlines in newspapers are becoming more and more controversial. Watergate, the energy crisis and the oil embargo hit our eyes every day we buy a paper.

Kidnappings occur in different regions and countries, to different ages and sexes. There seems to be no pattern to these events except for the demand of money.

What kind of people have the consciences for committing this type of crime? What are the childhoods of these desperate parasites, parasites who progress because of other people's finances and prestige.

Senior Interview

On October 19, 1955, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Jackson were blessed with their third baby girl, Betty Kay. Betty's two sisters are Kim and Brenda and her three brothers are James, Del and Jay.

Betty is majoring in Food Service at BOCES. She has been a member of the F.H.A. for four years and a member of Red Cross for six years. She played the part of Granny Carson in the Senior Play.

National Honor Society Induction

Last Wednesday, seven students of Andover Central School were inducted into the National Honor Society. The students included one senior - Carol Weber, and six Sophomores - Diane Bliss, Phyllis Freeland, Brian Halsey, Bob Hyland, Lisa Marsh, and Curt Vars.

Following the ceremony, a tea, served in the Home Economics Room, honoring the new members, was held with faculty and parents invited. Congratulations students!

Connection

Another member of the 100 Lap Club from the Swim-a-thon on March 4 was Dean Stein whose name was inadvertently omitted.

Rumor Has It

Rumor has it: That A. D. has made her one and only duo

That a certain senior thinks red heads have more fun

That Judy and John were seen in Bolivia in the wee-hours of the morning

That CeCe prefers Rancheros to white Plymouths

That Pipi Longstocking is back in town

That the friendly neighborhood vampire is making weekly trips to a few of the students

That a blue Ford truck is touring around Barney Street once again

That there is a romance brewing on the morning BOCES bus. Who is it going?

That K. H. prefers G. B. over F. B. and B. J.

That Mr. Mumma is going to try some "Grecian formula, hair restorer."

ADIRONDACK ADVENTURES

The only good thing about waiting for the opening of trout season is that you can catch up on your reading. And I've just finished on usual book entitled The Old Guide's Story of the Northern Adirondacks.

Those of us who are still casting artificial flies, and swatting black flies have heard hundreds of old tales about fishing and hunting in the Adirondacks. Rarely do we get a first person account of frontier life in northern New York.

The Old Guide's Story is an edited version of a series of articles written by Charles E. Merrill in 1930 and published in the Malone Evening Telegram. Charley Merrill really was an old guide, and he also chronicled the life of his father, Darius, who was one of the first white men to explore on foot and by boat the trackless wilderness surrounding the Chateaugay Valley.

To a modern sportsman, their hunting and fishing adventures were incredible. These were the days when mountain lions and wolves roamed the Adirondacks - Darius had several brushes with lions, and eventually killed one. Brook trout seemed to be caught from every trickle of water and big-four-pounders could be found in remote ponds.

The lake trout population in upper Chateaugay Lake was fabulous. When Darius was a young man, he and his father speared them at night using a pine torch for light. One time they took 64 in about two hours ranging from four to eight pounds each. They sold these "salmon" in Malone - an important source of cash in those days. They also netted whitefish for the market until it became illegal.

Deer hunting was done with hounds and there was plenty of venison for the table, and the sports who used to come to a resort hotel run by the Merrills. Darius eventually decided the chase was cruel, and his support helped outlaw this practice.

Traplines were a way of life at the northernmost edge of the Adirondack Mountains, and there are plenty of adventures told of real, old-time traplines run for bear and lynx, martin and mink

The Old Guide's Story was edited by Fay Welch, who was also a licensed Adirondack guide in his youth. He has taken great care to preserve the spirit and life of a nearly forgotten time. It recreates a hunting and fishing paradise - good for dreaming on these nights.

Ill., is visiting his brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kilbane.

Miss Louise Roberta Snyder of Alfred and Arthur LeRoy Kemp of Andover, were united in marriage, Saturday, January 8th, at the home of the bride's parents, by the Rev. Harold R. Austin of Andover.
