The Flu And What To Do

From Dr. Tartaglia
Andover Medical Center

The Flu encompasses a variety of miserable feelings. There is no medicine for the virus which causes the flu. Antibiotics do not help shorten it, prevent it or make it better. Some people who have other complicated diseases emphysema or other complications do require antibiotics to prevent certain serious complications, but the majority of people require and benefit only for symptomatic medications. These include: decongestants, cough suppressants and most important of all aspirin.

The most important thing in treating viral infections is to maintain adequate fluid intake and to take adequate aspirin. The fluids prevent thickening of the many secretions and prevent dehydration in those types of flu which have vomiting and diarrhea. Excellent fluids include: soda, Hawaiian Punch plain water and Gatoraid. Alcoholic beverages, beer, whiskey etc., while they seem to afford initial relief cause swelling of the brain tissues & generally increase the miserable feeling and headaches. Regular foods often will cause upset stomach and may exacerbate the nausea and diarrhea problem.

For those people who have serious upset stomach or excessive vomiting or actual bleeding of either the nose or any place should obvious not take oral aspirin. Rectal aspirin is excellent or Tylenol in the same dosage as aspirin is very good. The proper amounts — aspirin for adults are 2-3 adult aspirin every 4 hours round the clock and for children generally 1 grain of aspirin for every 10 pounds of body weight or for extremely high temperatures 1 1/2 grains of aspirin per 10 pounds of body weight is adequate and satisfactory.

The symptoms and fever of the virus may persist from 3 to 10 days, and this is not at all unusual. In addition for 1 to 2 weeks after the onset of the viral illness there will still be slight headaches, muscular aches and pains and various discomforts, and this is not at all unusual. The best and really the only thing that one can do when the flu strikes is to realize that it is going to be with you for awhile. not worry about it too much and get some rest.

IT'S THE MOST. BANK ON IT. COMING-

Another big most! Watch for it!

by Alex Rankin

March 19, 1974 — Echoing the statement of Ira L. Cahn of the Massapequa Post that weekly newspapers are the "essence of grass roots journalism," Gov. Wilson applauded the weekly press the other day when he appeared at the 122nd annual meeting of the New York Press Association in Syracuse.

Wilson went on to topics of the day such as taxes, which he thinks are too burdensome, and gasoline rationing, but most of the weekly editors and publishers were chuckling over the one-upmanship he pulled on their radio and television competitors as he arrived in Syracuse for the convention.

At an airport press conference a radio "reporter" shoved a microphone in Wilson's face and angrily demanded to know why during his last visit to Syracuse he spent all of his time at a Syracuse newspaper plant.

Wilson began by noting that he had done so because he had been invited by the publisher of the newspaper. Then the fun began.

Traditionally such press conferences run about 10 minutes, ending with a "thank you, governor." But this time no one stopped the show, and pretty soon the electronic media reporters, one by one ran out of tape and film until there was only one left and he, poor fellow, couldn't think of another question to ask.

Then, with his politest smile and voice, Wilson said, "Is there any member of the electronic media who feels he has been shortchanged?"

As a footnote, the governor then left for the taping of an exclusive interview — aired three days later — at the station where the reporter who asked the question at the airport works.

Wilson is about to take the politically dangerous step of proposing that a $250 million transit bond issue be placed on the ballot this November. That is dangerous because voters have rejected them soundly in the past and this year the names of every state legislator will be on the ballot as well as the governor's, a proximity that frightens politicians.

But the governor has taken a step to smooth over that problem that, in the long run, could benefit everyone in the state. In an effort to get State Comptroller Arthur Levitt to back the bond issue.

Wilson has agreed to study the possibility of curbing the power of State authorities and agencies to issue bonds.

For years this column has voiced Levitt's criticism that authorities have the power to issue bonds without voter approval at referendums, and that the interest payments on those bonds are often paid for by tax hikes laid on the public at large. For years it was a way for former Gov Rockefeller to do things — such as build the massive South Mall or the state university system — without once having to go to the voters for approval.

March 22, 1974 — How's this for confusion: Sen. James L. Buckley calls for President Nixon to resign and Sen. Jacob K. Javits disagrees saying the president should not resign. Another cast against labels.

Republicans who control the state Legislature could find only $68.9 million worth of fat in Gov. Wilson's budget for the state fiscal year beginning April 1, still leaving the governor with an all-time budget high of $9.3 billion — and no room for the kind of tax cuts most taxpayers have been waiting for for 15 years.

And some of what has been cut will find its way back via the "supplemental" budget normally passed in the closing hours of the session with little chance for examination by legislators let alone the public.

Wilson's men claim privately that the governor was locked into Rockefeller's budget because by the time he had resigned most of the decisions had already been made.

Staffers working for Republican Assembly Speaker Perry B. Duryea Jr., laugh at this, however pointing out that Wilson had plenty of time to scrap expensive Rockefeller programs if he wanted to.

Wilson seems to be making progress on another front, however. He has accepted the resignation of Emil Moshbacher Jr., chairman of the State's super gambling agency.

It was one of the last appointments made by Rockefeller before he quit, and had caused much controversy because of Moshbacher's high salary — $75,000 — and his lack of knowledge of the horse racing business in the state.

The Senate has passed and sent to the governor for signature or veto a bill requiring banks to pay at least two per cent interest on money held in mortgage escrow accounts.

Gov. Wilson's proposed $680 million transit package is in trouble unless legislative leaders agree to an amendment that would allow local governments a say in how much local transit authorities can spend. Under the present wording of the bill, the local governments are mandated to match and spend the state share.
