Senior Trip

The following paragraphs are excerpts taken from papers written by seniors expressing their feelings and impressions of Washington.

I consider my trip to Washington, D. C., an unforgettable experience. From all the cities I have seen in the United States and other countries, this one is the most beautiful.

It has a character of its own. Because the buildings are not exceedingly tall, one can find excellent views all over. The parks with the flowers and trees make Washington, D. C. a colorful and pleasant city.

I feel that my trip to Washington was a very fascinating experience. The most surprising thing about the city, was how clean it was. There was very little litter on the streets and everywhere you looked, you could see trees and flowers. The places we visited that impressed me the most were the Rock Creek Zoo, and the Washington Cathedral.

The senior trip is over. It was short, but impressive and enjoyable. I've always wanted to see the Washington Monument. It is always been beautiful to me, extremely beautiful. Wednesday night a small group of us decided to extend our tour and visit the monument. It was fantastic. We could see the Capital, the White House, Jefferson and Lincoln memorials, and all of the sights of the city. This was perhaps the greatest highlight of my senior trip.

The thing that impressed me on my trip in Washington, D. C., was the size of the city. All the houses (apartments) stores, Embassies and the different types of buildings were so close together; they were packed like "sardines."

Another thing that surprised me was all the different kinds of Embassies. Each country had its own Embassy right in Washington. Then, seeing the President as we were approaching the White House really made my trip worthwhile.

Washington is very beautiful this time of year with its Cherry Blossoms and all of the different trees and plants from all over the world. One of the sites which I enjoyed the most was the National Airport. I would have liked to have spent all night there.

On my trip to Washington, I enjoyed most the waiting in line to see the White House. As I and a group of others, waited in this long line, the President returned from one of his many trips with the usual scenery of policemen surrounding him. This impressed me the most because, I feel that no matter how watergate turns out, President Nixon tried his best to be President of our Country!

The best part of my senior trip was the very first night I was in Washington. A few of us went for a walk around the city. We didn't know where we were going, but we just kept walking. It was fun because as we walked we saw many things.

First of all, we saw the Washington Monument and began walking toward that. Then we noticed the White House, Capitol, Lincoln Memorial and Jefferson Memorial plus a lot more - but those were all we recognized. It was really exciting because it was our first night there and we kept noticing many things, one at a time.

In Washington I was impressed the most by the Washington Cathedral. The intricate sculpture and the huge size of the building were impressive. We were all filled with awe as we walked through it. The ceiling of the building seemed to be almost out of sight. The time it took to carve the sculptures and build this church is inconceivable.

What impressed me the most, was seeing the statue of the man raising the flag at Iwo Jima. The statue showed that each man there was straining every muscle to get the flag raised. A man reaching out his hand to get one last hold. The spot light hit the statue which illuminated each man's face, which showed the great pride they had in what they were doing.

Our trip to Washington was a very unforgettable experience. Many things impressed me, about our trip. I think the most beautiful sight was the Washington National Cathedral. The architecture was most fascinating, especially the stained glass windows, depicting different facets of Biblical history.

When I stood on the spot where President John F. Kennedy was buried, a strange chill went through me and I could not believe that I was actually there in Arlington Cemetery.

I think the thing that impressed me the most was the changing of the guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in the Arlington National Cemetery. The exact precision with which the guard operates is truly amazing. This was one aspect of our trip that impressed me the most, but I will always remember our Senior Trip.

My first impression of Washington D. C., was one of astonishment and amazement at the beauty of the city and also its historical value to the United States.

Its beauty and its significances in our history is overwhelming. To think that the complete history of the United States is located in or near that city is almost as amazing as the city itself.

Just being in Washington gave me a special pride in my country - it brought out a part of me that I never knew I possessed. After seeing all of the historical sites and then seeing the President of our great country, practically anyone would realize just how great and wonderful our government really is.

We also had great chaperones and my compliments go to Mr. and Mrs. Davis, Mr. Szabo and Mrs. Boyer for letting us have a good time and helping us to enjoy our trip.

A special thank-you to the Burgers for Breakfast.

Senior Interview

by Judy Bliss

Ever wonder who that all happy, good looking Andover Senior boy is? His name is Brian Charles Lynch. Born July 14, 1956, Brian is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Lynch. The rest of his family consists of two sisters, Vicki and Martha and one brother, Robert.

Brian holds a science major. His many activities in school have included: basketball, three years; track, one year and soccer, one year. He has been a member of Varsity Club two years. Brian played the part of the "Heckler" in the play THE MAIL MUST GO THROUGH which we helped present in Mansfield for competition.

Brian placed third in the Oratorical Contest in his junior year. This year Brian devoted many hours of hard work to our Yearbook as he has worked on layout. Event though Brian is busy, he still finds time for pleasure. He enjoys driving the famed "Hevy Chevy" around and tells me that much of his spare time is spent "putting her back together."

Brian also loves riding horses. Next year Brian will go to Alfred Tech to study drafting. We would like to wish Brian the greatest success and happiness in his future years.

Editorial

by Teresa Polmateer

According to a recent Gallup poll, "Henry Kissinger is the man Americans admire most in the world today." I agree completely with the above quotation. Anybody would have to admire this man's lifestyle, the people he meets, and most importantly his ability to persuade and get along with people here and abroad. His most admirable trait is the congeniality between the press and himself.

Kissinger has earned the title of "Super K" because of his lifestyle and dealings with foreign countries. He has opened up new relationships with other nations and leaders. He has helped to calm down the energy crisis. Kissinger has ended wars and possibly prevented others. Kissinger is very worthy of this sentimental title with full appreciation from Americans.

Even though Kissinger is Super I would not support him as a presidential contender in 1976, if he were able to run. During his term in politics Kissinger has dealt mainly with foreign policy. Therefore, I do not think it would be possible for him to deal domestically. He has a very acute mind and unhappily I would have to state that the Presidency as it is now would be too boring for him. The only way I would support him would be in the case of co-presidents. Kissinger on foreign policy and a Mr. X on domestic policy. I believe that this will soon be needed due to the complexity of both policies.

Politically speaking the word "detent" means a relaxation of strained relations between two nations. Kissinger has the ability to accomplish detente. That is why I believe he may be the most important member of the current cabinet.
