About twenty-five people attended the hearing on the proposed budget at Greenwood Central School, Tuesday night. The budget of $649,918.72 was presented by Supervising Principal Gary Moore with assistance from the School Board

Two questions were asked and most of them were on State Aid. Moore said that State Aid Forms will not be available until August and only rough estimates can be made now. He asked the group for answers to the question (What direction should the school system take?) He reviewed some areas that re considered needing work.

We desperately need a music room and an Art room and more storage space. He also cited the need for expanding the Library facilities to make better use of the equipment and materials the school has, pointing out that only 22 students can use the Library at one time. More important is the need for more offerings for high school students.

Discussing proposed building repairs he said that system controls, the bell systems and the public address system need replacement. He suggested the stair treads and halls and classroom floor tiles in the original building need repairing and that work is needed on the pool floor

Mr. Moore suggested that a committee should be formed to include himself, Board representatives, teachers and community members to study these and other areas of concern. No action was taken although one person volunteered to serve on such a committee. Mr. Moore said the matter of a committee to obtain more involvement of people in the District would be discussed at Monday's Board Meeting.

The twenty-nine boys and girls in the Sixth Grade recently completed a six weeks Social Studies project. It involved them in Geography, History, Public Speaking, Decision Making the use of the Library.

They divided themselves in eight groups some with three members and some with four. Each group selected a country of the world to study. Four groups selected television documentary style to present the material they learned about France, the British Isles, India and Africa. The other four used large displays to present their information on the Soviet Union, Germany, Southeast Asia and Argentina.

The boys and girls worked in the media center to look up information in encyclopedias and other reference books. They selected pictures to use in their presentations. They prepared individual reports, maps and posters. The basic thrust of each project report was the history of the country. Mrs. Ann Zuschin, teaches the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Grade Social Studies classes and has the Sixth Grade for her classroom. The Fourth Grade was invited to visit the Sixth Grade classroom to hear the reports and to view the displays. Mrs. Zuschin introduced each group.

The children learned to evaluate statements they found in texts as fact, inference or value judgement. The reports gave many of them a chance to gain confidence in public speaking. By sharing their project results they made the rest of the class aware of the history of many parts of the world.

Mrs. Zuschin said this has been a new approach. The children worked in groups and decided for themselves what they wanted to accomplish and who should do what. The results have been very rewarding and Mrs. Zuschin said she had been busier than ever giving advice and offering suggestions when asked. It will help the children on preparing reports and using reference materials in higher grades.
