Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Hussey attended a luncheon at Ponce de Leon in Hornell, Wednesday, July 31 for thirty-two retired District Superintendents of schools of Western New York

Mrs. Catherine Hendy went with the Emmett Flansburg family of Hornell to Strucka, Pa., Sunday.

According to the Hornell Evening Tribune, the Fairman Brothers of DuBois, Pa., drilled a gas well 4600 feet deep this past week on the Gerald Cornell farm off Route 17 on the Jasper-Greenwood Road. The drillers did discover 125 feet of Oriskany Reef. The Reef discovery is a factor in the decision to have a geological evaluation before deciding whether to drill a second well in the general area. The Oriskany Reef and sometimes accompanying Oriskany and which contains gas deposits were discovered for the first time with the development of the Wyckoff field in the same area several years ago. That exploration was conducted by Wyckoff Development Corp. of late College Pa.

The Redmond-Miller Family Reunion was held Sunday at the Greenwood United Methodist Church with thirty-five in attendance. Officers are: President, Redmond Goodno of Buffalo; Vice President, Kenneth Miller of Rochester; and Historian, Mrs. Leonard Hollenbeck of Jasper. The reunion will continue to be held the first Sunday in August at the Greenwood United Methodist Church.

The Goodwill Truck from Buffalo is scheduled to make a pick-up at the United Methodist Church in Greenwood, Friday, August 16.

The Greenwood Ambulance was called to Rexville, Thursday to take 8-year-old Jeffrey Grist to the Jones Memorial Hospital in Wellsville. The chain came off his bicycle in the intersection and he lost control and his bicycle veered into the right front fender of a car driven by Marlene Abernathy of Henrietta. She swerved trying to avoid him. He was thrown against the car windshield. He had a broken leg, cuts and abrasions of the face and head injury.

The Chicken Bar-B-Que at St. Mary's Church in Rexville was well attended Sunday. It was reported that the second serving of chicken was late in arriving from Stearns in Alfred because a cloudburst had put out the fire. Greenwood was well represented both in workers and attendance. Monday Mrs. Mary McCaffrey and Mrs. Margaret Mullen went to Rexville to help clean up the rectory.

Special music Sunday at the United Methodist Church was two duets sung by Patty Mills and Vickie Losey; also Romona Ellis played her flute for one of the numbers.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Hussey were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Leffingwell at Panama and attended Church there. In the evening Mr. Hussey spoke at Ellington, his hometown, at a religious service to open their Sesquicentennial.

Mrs. Joseph Moran and daughter Kathleen of Los Angeles, Calif., who is visiting relatives at Ellington, came back with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Hussey to spend a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Marc Mullen and two daughters moved from Almond in July to the property they bought from Mr. and Mrs. James Murphy in the Spring.

Mr and Mrs. Larry Tuttle and son moved this week-end from their home to Dansville. They will be coming back week-ends to redecorate their house here.

Mr. and Mrs. John Murray and family moved their household goods from Liverpool to Hershey last week, but couldn't have the house yet. Mrs. Murray and children are staying this week with her

SUNFISH

Summer family vacations which include fishing are bound to also include sunfish, for these common and cooperative fish are a part of almost every successful family fishing trip. Though sometimes referred to as a kid's fish, on light tackle they can be very scrappy and add some real zest to an adult fishing trip which might otherwise be a flop. As far as they go, they are tasty little morsels too.

In upstate New York we have four readily distinguishable species of sunfish. Unfortunately for the neophyte, they hybridize and produce various combinations which complicate their identification. Since all are unprotected and may be taken in any number at any time, identification is purely academic.

The pumpkinseed and the bluegill are the two dominant sunfish. The redbreast sunfish, a native of waters flowing into the Atlantic, has hopped the divides here and there and is present in some more western waters. From western New York and the midwest comes the longear sunfish, which has moved eastward across the State.

The pumpkinseed, or common sunfish, is the most universal. Because it is so common and universal, its beauty is often overlooked. With the blue stripes on its head and the stiff black earflap bordered with white and tipped with red, it may well be our most beautiful fish. Its olive-colored body with red or bronze spots turns a bright yellow below.

By contrast the bluegill is a dark, drab fish showing vertical bars. It gets its name from the blue border on the lower part of its gill cover which extends forward to the jaw. The only other color is some yellow on its breast. If it isn't too darkly colored, a large black spot on the rear portion of the dorsal fin readily identifies it. Its earflap is entirely black and flexible.

Prior to World War II the bluegill was rather spottily distributed in New York, mainly in the western counties. As the influence of the Soil Conservation Service and their farm pond construction began to spot landscape with small ponds stocked with largemouth bass and bluegills, the range of this, the largest of the sunfishes, quickly spread throughout the State by the escape of fish from these ponds.

The redbreast sunfish is most easily confused with the bluegill. Both have flexible black earflaps; the redbreast's are long and narrow compared to the short wide one of the bluegill. Its pectoral fins are short compared to the long ones of the bluegill. The redbreast is also much more colorful with a few blue streaks on its face and a red or yellow breast and belly. It lacks the barring on its side that characterizes the bluegill, and its dorsal and anal fins are without spotting.

Generally speaking the longear sunfish is the smallest of the upstate sunfish, though there is the spotted sunfish of the Delaware Watershed which is too small to be anything but an aquarium fish. In common with the bluegill and the redbreast, the longear sunfish has a flexible earflap. It is, however, relatively longer and wider, is margined with white, and its points obliquely upward. The earflap of the male is tipped with red as is the much smaller stiff earflap of the pumpkinseed. The longear is dark above with many blue spots and vermiculations on the head and back. The dark gives way to a yellow belly.

Close relatives of these sunfish are the rock bass and the crappies. A count of the spines in the anal fin will quickly separate the two groups, for the sunfish have only three stiff fins in the fore part of the anal fin while the crappies and rock bass have at least five.

The best fishing for sunfish is in the larger more fertile warm-water ponds where there are also good populations of gamefish. The reason for this is two-fold. First, a fertile pond is capable of producing bigger and better fish, just as fertile land produces bigger and better plants.

The second reason relates to the high breeding potential of the clan. Where there are too many mouths to feed, sunfish develop into stunted population. Sunfish in these waters may continue to live and breed and never exceed four inches. Such small fish obviously do not attract many fishermen.
