Report Cards were just given out. How many of you maybe had second thoughts about taking them home? They were thirty-week report cards, which means there's only 10 weeks left to make some maybe necessary changes to your marks.

Before we know it the Regents and local test schedules will be upon us and some of us are going to wonder where those last ten weeks went. Some serious thought as to how you can get your grades up ought to be considered in the very near future. These last ten weeks are important.

You can make those failing grades become passing grades, if you really try. So don't wait until a week before tests to realize what you need help in, get it now.

Summer Jobs

by Lori Bridge

How many students are all ready out looking for work over summer vacation? Probably tons of them, so those of you that haven't and are interested in a summer job should probably hurry and do some serious looking. It would be a good idea to go out and look now before the colleges let out and give us high school people even more competition.

What better way is there to spend your summer vacation than earning money? I know it's great not to have anything to do for a couple weeks after school lets out, but vacation eventually gets boring and you even start looking forward to school again. Apply for a job now.
