Are you the freshman who doesn't feel competitive enough for high school soccer, but are still good on your feet? Or the sophomore who has a light school workload and would like something to do after school?

Cross Country is not a particularly demanding sport, but will help keep you physically fit the way you'd like to be. This sport involves running, not around a track but across the country.

New Teachers

Replacing Mrs. Griffiths, who is Career Education Director this year, is Mrs. Deborah Persons. Mrs. Persons attended Hartwick University for two years and Alfred University for two years.

Has anyone noticed a new good-looking Fourth Grade Teacher Andover is proud to introduce Mr. Gill, from Oswego, New York.

He feels it is advantageous that his students are young, and compliments them for being very creative children. He likes the small school district, because it is a major factor in the close interaction between teachers and students.

Replacing Mr. Carmody, who retired last year, is Mr. Robert McEnroe.

He attended Alfred University for four years, and lives in Wellsville, where he previously taught for four years. He has also taught one year at Richburg, and twelve years at Alfred Ag-Tech.

Mr. McEnroe is married and has five children - three girls and two boys. When asked if he liked sports, we found out that he once wanted to be a physical education teacher, and is interested in becoming involved in sports in Andover.

Track Team

The Andover Track pounds to the top as the Cross Country Runners make an all out effort to return to top-notch condition for this year's coming season.

CYCLE TIPS

Cycle Riders Find Rules Of The Road Differ

Automobile drivers who have decided to switch to the more economical motorcycle for commuting to work, may find the rules of the road slightly different according to Dr. Kent Jessee, Director of Motorcycle Education Programs at Kawasaki Motors Corporation, Santa Ana, Calif., one of the country's largest motorcycle manufacturers.

"Most accidents involving an automobile and a motorcycle are the fault of the automobile driver," says Dr. Jessee. "To ride safely in rush hour traffic, the motorcyclist has to take extra precautions to make up for the motorist's possible lack of attention." For safer riding Dr. Jessee suggests:

- 1. Practice good riding rules. For the motorcyclist, it's doubly important to signal turns, pass only when it is safe and have a proper riding attitude.
2. Learn to ride under the guidance of a qualified instructor. Most dealers sponsor a beginning rider course or can direct you to a local organization offering one. Kawasaki, for instance, has designed a program with the aid of the Motorcycle Safety Foundation and Texas A & M University that has been implemented by high schools, private, industrial, military groups and many community police departments.
3. Make yourself as visible as possible. You may already have experienced some close calls involving an auto driver who failed to notice you. Wear bright clothing. Ride with your headlight on (in some states this is already a law) and make use of reflectors or reflectorized material. Of course, you should also be wearing an approved safety helmet and protective clothing.

4. Use extreme caution when approaching intersections. This is more important on a motorcycle than when you are driving a car. Yield the right of way and remember the driver of an oncoming vehicle probably isn't looking for you. Double check for traffic right and left, and especially, be on the lookout for the motorist making a left turn. Use the same care when approaching alleys, traffic circles, driveways, entrance and exit ramps to roadways.
5. Give yourself room to take evasive action. Because you are on a smaller, less visible vehicle, the motorist may not give you as much room when passing as he might another auto. Anticipate that - avoid accelerating as he passes and be prepared to slow down.
6. Avoid the motorist's blind spots. When following a motorist, avoid riding too far to the vehicle's right side. This is a blind spot for most motorists. Try to position yourself in the left third of the traffic lane. Make sure the driver of the car can see you, either in his rear view mirror or side mirror. Never tailgate. Give yourself plenty of room to stop safely.
