Genesee Hospital Seeks Volunteers

Volunteers are urgently needed to help combat America's number one killer, Atherosclerosis. This disease is basically responsible for heart attacks, strokes, and related fatal diseases that account for some one million deaths, or 55% of all deaths in the United States annually.

The National Heart and Lung Institute is conducting a program of three participating medical institutions, including The Genesee Hospital, Rochester, New York, to determine whether lowering blood cholesterol levels will reduce the risk of heart attacks. The Genesee Hospital needs one thousand men and women between the ages of 30 and 59 who have had only one heart attack (suffered within the past three years), who are free of diabetes, high blood pressure, and who are not greatly overweight. All such people are asked to call The Genesee Hospital Clinical Center at (716) 263-6301 (collect) for a preliminary telephone screening. If you are interested in the study, you will be invited to schedule three mornings of test procedures at The Genesee Hospital. These tests include several diagnostic tests, blood tests and a complete physical examination. All tests are done in cooperation with your personal physician.
